Opening days seem endless

Amid the perennial jokes about gullible sophomores purchasing elevator passes from sophisticated upperclassmen, 1,354 of us returned to classes late in August. As the steamy days of late summer turned to fall, we settled into the routine of classes, releases, study halls and weekends. We complained about the tight part-time job market and the high price of gasoline. We ate pizza, quarter-pounders and fries, and many of us succumbed to "Pac-Man fever" and began feeding our quarters to video games. Wearing the unofficial school uniform — jeans, jerseys or sweaters, Nikes and red nylon CF jackets — we enjoyed the unseasonably warm fall days.

Spirit surges in September

The year began with a burst of old-fashioned school spirit as students "got rowdy" at the year's first pep assembly. Incoming sophomores won the spirit jug in some "spirited" competition.

Enthusiasm boiled over at the assembly, and everyone climbed out of the stands streaming onto the gym floor to mill around and cheer spontaneously.

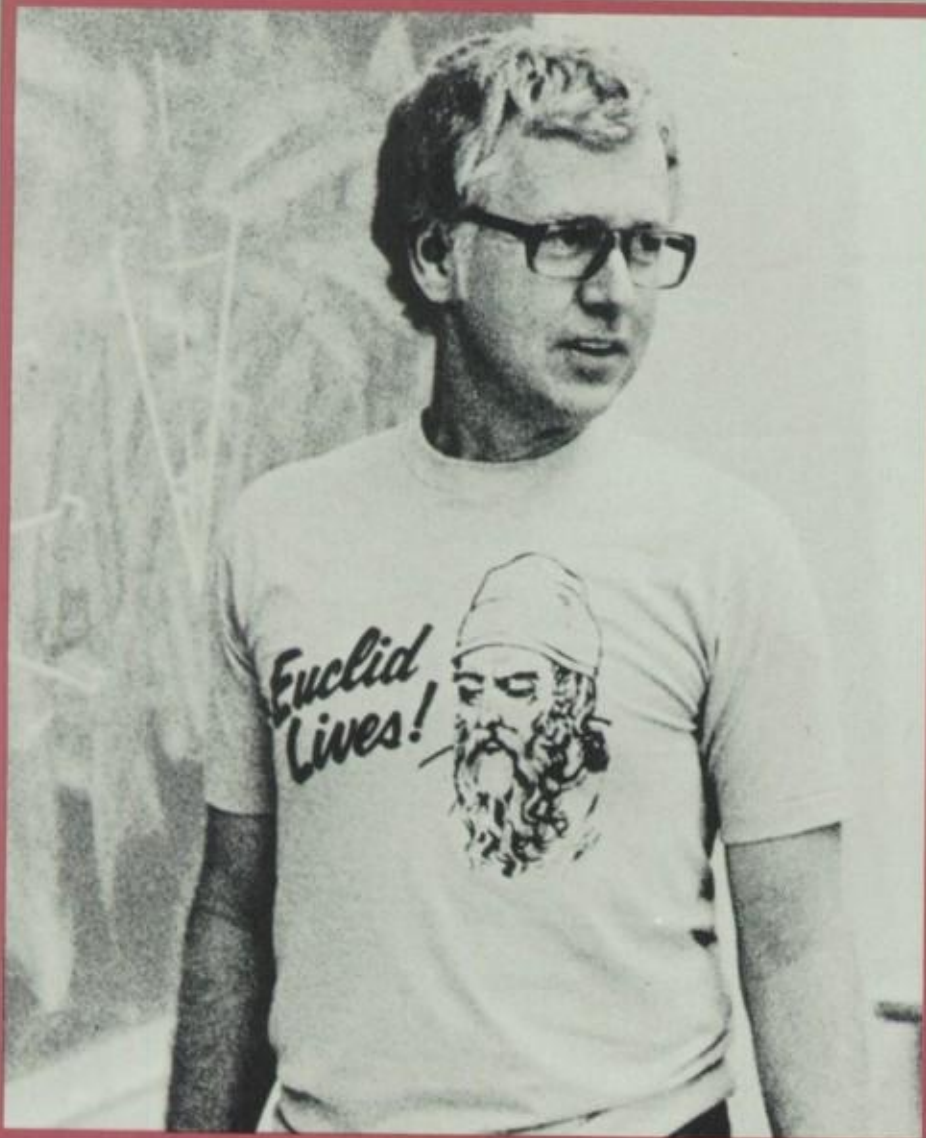

Although the football team lost its initial game of the season to Cedar Rapids Washington, fan enthusiasm continued throughout the football season, making a memorable fall for students and staff.

Stones, Toma appear in Dome

Notable visitors during the year were the Rolling Stones and television personality David Toma.

Throughout the fall, rumors persisted that the Stones would make Cedar Falls a stop on their first U.S. tour in three years. At an October 28 press conference, officials announced that Stones tickets would go on sale immediately for $16.50 each.

"Scalping" became the word of the day as the ticket "haves" offered to sell their extra tickets for prices ranging up to $200 each. A sell-out crowd of 24,000 witnessed the November 20 concert, the only "small market" on the Stones' tour.

Joining students from other northeast Iowa high schools January 26 in the UNI-Dome, CFHS students heard anti-drug crusader David Toma speak out about drug abuse.

About 90 percent of the student body attended the two-hour presentation which lasted most of the morning.

Toma discussed his experiences as a drug addict and undercover policeman and warned students about what he called "an epidemic" in America.

Activities make school fun

Although we spent four to six hours a day attending classes, it was the out-of-class activities that helped make school days fun.

Building floats, running in the snake dance and cheering in the UNI-Dome highlighted the fall. Working on plays and the Variety Show livened up the winter months, and the jazz show, Prom and graduation were high points of the spring.

The major event of the year in which nearly all students participated was Sadie Hawkins Day in March. About 90 percent of the student body and many of the teachers dressed for the day in wacky costumes for the annual celebration of silliness.

STUDENT LIFE

Although life sometimes seemed to center around tests, term papers and school assignments, we still found time to enjoy Pac-Man and pizza, cruise University and hang out at the mall.

We carried portable tape players, watched soap operas, looked for part-time jobs and waited for the weekends.

The brutal winter weather had some benefits — occasional “snow days” and long weekends.

When spring finally arrived, we headed for the parks to relax with our friends and “catch some rays.”

Cattle Congress: Food, fun and a day off from school

National Dairy Cattle Congress always means fun games and a day off from school. As always, this year's NCC included rides, displays, games, livestock judging and live entertainment.

Waylon Jennings, The Statler Brothers and the Barnes RCA Rodeo were among the 1981 attractions.

Cattle Congress means Tom Thumb donuts, cotton candy, Wonder bars, foot long hot dogs, hot pretzels, Kentucky Fried Chicken and lots of soft drinks.

With all the games and rides, the midway was the first place to go and the last place to leave.

Stopping to put on his marching band uniform, Mike Hemming rests at a piano and organ display.

The double ferris wheel, Tilt-o-Whirl, Flying Bobs, Hurricane and Scrambler were a few favorite rides. Target practices, skill games and space games were popular.

Walking through the halls, one could see and hear piano and organ music, vacuum cleaner demonstrations and sales pitches for whirlpool baths and kitchen utensils.

Farm machinery from piglet nurseries and milkers to tractors and corn driers was displayed.

Shopping bags full of literature, matchbooks, pens, combs, pencils and miscellaneous other articles were souvenirs of a day of Cattle Congress.

People populate local parks, playgrounds

With the arrival of warm weather, Cedar Falls students had lots of outdoor activities to keep them busy. With the late spring, students were anxious to get out into the fresh air.

People were seen at George Wyth Park on weekends and after school. With the newly remodeled park only a year old, students enjoyed taking advantage of it. Although hiking and picnicking were popular, getting an early start on a tan at the new beach was a favorite activity.

Island Park, also located on the Cedar River, was popular for swimming, boating, waterskiing, picnicking and parties.

The disc golf course was a favorite for Frisbee-throwers. A lot of people found Island Park a good place to congregate with friends and have good times.

When there wasn't enough time to go out to a park in between classes, students found plenty of other ways to take advantage of their free time. Students sat on the CFHS steps and lawn "taking in the rays."

Throwing Frisbees on the open field north of the school was an everyday occurrence in the spring. Many students took advantage of the sun while sitting on their cars talking and listening to their stereos.

When students wanted to stay cool and relax, the library was the place to go. Television sets with headphones were available to students who wanted to watch their favorite soap operas and game shows.

Headsets connected to the library stereo or to private tape players allowed students to "rock out" to their favorite groups.

time to spree

In Cedar Falls there were many places for teens to shop. College Square Mall offered convenience and a variety of stores. There were boutiques such as the Snooty Fox on College Hill and shops on the Parkade in downtown Cedar Falls. A new shopping mall, Thunder - Ridge Court, opened before Christmas. Favorite stores were those that had clothes plus the accessories that went with them. Sheri Minikus said, "I like to shop at a store that has a variety of up-to-date clothes. The friendliness of the salespeople is important to me."

Quality and price were important factors in the clothes selected. Most took time to consider before buying as not all students had jobs. Lisa Petersen said, "I like comfortable, high quality clothes that I can get at a reasonable price."

Keeping up with fashion styles was expensive. In 1981-1982 a pair of designer jeans was $25-$40, sweaters for girls were $28-$30, and flannel shirts for guys cost about $20.

There was little difference in clothes worn at home and clothes worn to school. Most teens favored wearing jeans and being casual. They selected clothes according to comfort, their own tastes and style. Catherine Wilcox agreed, "I like to dress up but still feel comfortable." Connie Cowell said, "I like to wear anything purple, jeans and tennis shoes."

Youth organizations benefit students

Junior Achievement, Young Life and 4-H activities attracted many students who enjoyed participating in community youth organizations.

To learn about business, many CFHS students became active in Junior Achievement of Blackhawkland.

Achievers formed companies and designed, produced and sold their own products. Randy Cox, who was president of Young Workers, said, "I mainly joined JA to see what it was about and to meet new people, but when I was elected president of our company, I learned how to 'take command' of people in a way so they respected me."

Susan Shaw said, "I wanted the responsibility of leadership and I wanted the inside story about how a business is operated."

Judy Sater said, "I joined JA because I wanted the business experience and because I was in it last year and it was really fun."

"JA is a step forward into future business opportunity," said Jean Johnson.

"I joined JA to learn more about business trades," said Larry Howard.

Becky Wheeler was named the outstanding young businesswoman of the year and received a $200 scholarship at the Future Unlimited banquet in April. Sater was runnerup for the honor and was voted president of the Achievers Association for next year.

Melissa Simon was named best salesperson and Suzanne Syhlman was the outstanding female achiever of the year, with Betsy Wheeler runnerup for the honor.

Kim Voss was runnerup for the vice president of finance award.

APPROXIMATELY 200 students from CFHS and NUHS were members of Young Life, "a group of people looking for adventure in life and looking at the Christian lifestyle," Steve Veit-Carey, area director for Black Hawk County, said.

"Young Life is a group of kids exploring who Christ is and learning a few facts about what the Bible says instead of being told 'this is what you have to believe,'" Veit-Carey said.

At the beginning of the school year, Young Life members went to a weekend camp at Wyoming, Iowa.

Each month Young Life sponsored one large group meeting. Members also met weekly in private homes on Monday evenings.

About 20 CFHS students were scheduled to go to a camp in Minnesota during the summer for waterskiing, canoeing, basketball and other activities.

"IT'S AN EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM that's fun," Mary TeWinkle, Black Hawk County 4-H Extension director.

"It's fun to learn how to do things by participating and doing them," TeWinkle said. "You get to plan things, not have them planned for you."

There were 14 4-H clubs in the metro area, she said. Club members participate in camps, conferences, educational presentations and demonstrations.

Members of the County Council planned special activities such as youth dances, overnights, Junior Fun Night and the 4-H fair.

Members of 4-H could go on to state conferences and could win national awards and scholarships, she said.

As the snow slowly melted away, the wandering eye began to frequent the sunny classroom window more regularly.

Tempting thoughts of "flashing that Coppertone tan" and "making the natives restless" proved to be too much for sunlovers as the winter snow finally vanished in mid-April.

The media saturated us with advertisements for tanning products that claimed to produce that deep, dark luscious body — with or without aid from the sun.

Summer beckoned relentlessly to students in humid classrooms.

Soon the enticements became unbearable. Students took to their lawn chairs, tanning blankets and beach towels during lunch and after school. Weekends were spent on the beach at George Wyth State Park as well as in backyards or at other parks.

Ray Edwards swimming pool opened Memorial Day weekend offering added enjoyment to water-loving sunners.

As the days grew increasingly warmer and fans appeared in classrooms, rumors surfaced that some students were actually calling in sick or skipping their afternoon classes to "lay out" during the best sunning hours.

During the final days of classes, t-shirt and swim strap marks and that unmistakable burn red color abounded in the hallways.

WEEKENDS MAJOR PART OF STUDENT LIFE

Whether your preference was movies, cruising, video games, TPing, dates or wild parties, there were many things for people to do on the weekends.

Weekends provided a break in school life and were eagerly anticipated. Among the many things to do, the most popular was going to parties.

The street most widely used by CF students and Waterloo students alike was University Avenue. "You can see your friends and make new ones." "That's where everyone goes," students said of "the strip."

Warm nights attracted people and cars to the movies. Drive-ins gave people two or three movies for the price they paid for one at the indoor theatres.

When the video game craze began, it became a favorite weekend pastime. Two new arcades were opened in the area, Hyper Space on the Parkade and The Wizard's Den at Thunder Ridge Mall.

Fun and Games at College Square Mall was still popular too. Arcades were full during the week as well as Friday and Saturday.

These were not the only activities students were involved in on the weekends.

Other people found their own entertainment.

At the end of the school year, there were quite a few rainy Saturdays, but this didn't disturb the feeling of relief in most people as they walked out of the building on Friday afternoon, saying farewell until Monday morning.

Working: Heading for independence

The unemployment rate went up, locally, to 5.9% causing a great strain on high school students looking for jobs. High school seniors had the opportunity to get involved in the race for employment through co-op programs.

Others held jobs at such places as McDonald's, Show Biz Pizza Place, Donutland, Bishop's, Hometown and in the school's library, resource centers and offices.

Junior Judy Kofron, who worked at McDonald's, said she worked because it was good experience and she enjoyed the people with whom she worked.

Karen Davis, a junior who worked at Show Biz Pizza Place, said she joined the work force because the job sound like fun.

Most students said working didn't take up much of their time because they usually worked on weekends and one day out of the week. Senior Bruce Warm felt that the reason most students worked was for money, to get out of the house, for the experience and to get an idea of how it would be when they get out of School.

Senior Steve Jones thought the reason for working was to get money for dates and so a young person didn't need to depend on parents.

Julie Jenkins, a senior, worked as a switchboard operator in the principal's office. Having her job, she said, didn't hurt her school work. She said she could do her homework there. "The money for college comes in handy, and when you have sports, this is about the only job you can handle."

Brad Reifsteck and L. D. Bean, both juniors, worked at Bill Heiple Buick washing cars. Their job didn't conflict with their school work.

Reifsteck said, "It was fun working with the other guys."

Bean said, "Having a job after school and on weekends conflicts with being in school sports. You really have to juggle your schedule around."

Junior Jodi Nottger was a ski school instructor at Oak Highlands in Waverly.

She enjoyed her job and thought it would help her in the future since she liked working with people.

Junior Lisa Danielsen worked at Taco Bell. She said, "Working sometimes conflicts with doing your homework because you have to work so late sometimes."

As for future jobs, she said, "Working at Taco Bell will help me get a better job because I'll have experience."

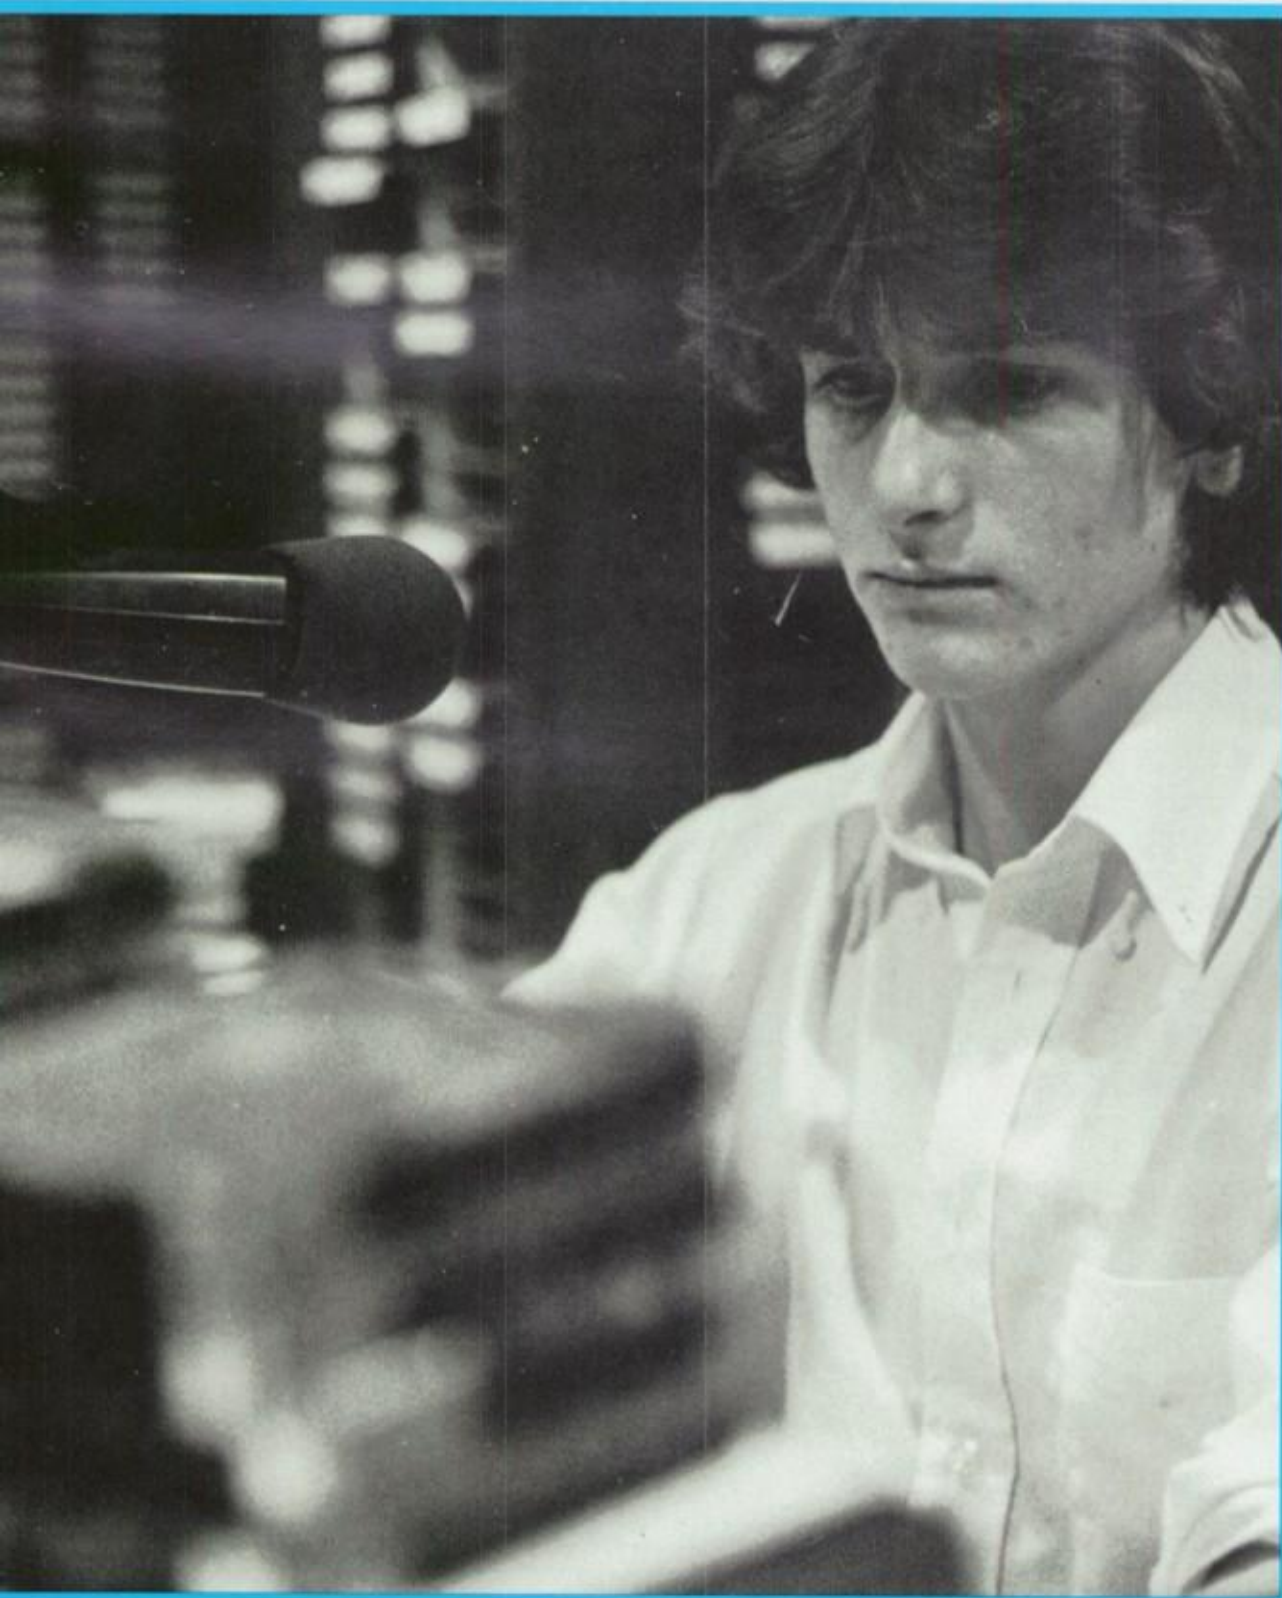

Deb Vanderwerf, DE coordinator, felt that by working, students developed good work habits and human relation techniques.

Body bound

The desire for physical fitness fast became almost an obsession with young and old alike.

And into the "young" category fit CFHS students, both male and female. Many students gained fitness by participating in health clubs.

"Health clubs have grown 30 to 50 percent within the last three years," said Randy Petscha, manager of the Century Health Club.

This was evident locally because there were other health clubs as well — Total Fitness Center, Olympic Gym and Spa and Elaine Powers, which was exclusively for women.

For people who wanted something more than a health club, the newest addition was the Cedar Falls Karate and Health Club.

Olympic offered a weight-training program for CFHS students with a trainer for every 10-15 people. A $4 discount was offered to CF football players at Total Fitness Center for their membership.

Not only did exercise do wonders for one's shape; it also helped one's moods. People who exercised were more likely to handle everyday stresses better than those who didn't.

Once you set up an exercise routine, it was very easy to get addicted — and many did.

Christmas cheer is everywhere

Decorated windows and hall displays exclaiming, "Joyeux Noel," people passing out candy canes, cultural experiences overflowing with foreign foods, and snowflakes in the air meant Christmas at CFHS. The holiday celebration was officially rung in by a glowing Christmas concert by members of the varsity choir, pops singers and orchestra.

Christmas was a special event for those attending the girl-ask-guy dance at UNI's Maucker Union December 19 from 10 - 1 a.m., featuring the Tennyson.

On the last day before vacation, a Student Forum assembly brought out the talents of the orchestra and varsity choir. A skit portraying a third grade classroom party featured famous personalities like Bo Derek, Dolly Parton, Jane Fonda, Marlon Brando, Richie Cunningham and Alexander Haig. The highlight for some students was a visit by jolly old Saint Nick, who gave traditional gag gifts to the three building principals.

Calorie Gallery: Pigging Out

Burger King, McDonald's, QuikTrip and Mobil's game room were the top four establishments where juniors and seniors hung out during their hour lunch breaks. Other favorite places were the Hyper-space game room, Taco Bell, Shakey's and Godfather's. Some went home or to a friend's house.

Most students enjoyed the freedom of open lunch. Principal Les Huth said he felt CFHS privileges were unique because "most other schools don't offer open lunch privileges."

When students weren't enjoying open lunch outside the school, they sat in the parking lot, did homework in the resource centers, or just listened to music in the library.

Only juniors and seniors had open lunch privileges; sophomores were confined to the school for fourth hour. Most juniors and seniors felt sophomores should not have open lunch because they felt underclassmen couldn't handle the responsibilities and that open lunch was a big step from junior high.

Sophomores argued the policy was unfair.

Huth said he did not foresee a policy change in the future.

THE HALLS OF CFHS became a junk food jungle as members of organizations sold M&M's, candy bars and other calorie-laden treats to raise money. After school students grabbed Doritos, cookies, Twinkies and pop.

Altogether it was enough to make Richard Simmons cry. Junk food meant pizza, pop, Twinkies, potato chips and anything with low nutritional value, according to some CF students.

Quarter-eating machines catch on

"I've got a pocket full of quarters, and I'm headin' for the arcade. I don't have a lot of money, but I'm bringin' in everything I made . . ." These words from the song "Pac Man Fever" could have very well been the Cedar Falls High School theme song.

New places, such as Wizard's Den, Show Biz Pizza Place and Hyper Space game room caused many students to rake out their quarters and head for their favorite arcade.

Of the many video and pinball games, Pac Man, Battlezone, Space Invaders and Asteroids were by far the most popular. Pac Man was played by moving an "eater" around a court and trying to eat dots, while the other three favorites were played by shooting at objects.

In Battlezone, players shot at tanks and some space ships. In Asteroids, one shot at "space rocks." As the name implied, Space Invaders was a game of getting rid of space creatures. Most of the games offered Cedar Falls students a chance to escape ordinary life and be phernalia, such as t-shirts, bumper stickers, key chains and even an album.

Books and magazines were published on the subject, and the single, "Pac Man Fever" was a hit with the Cedar Falls High School students.

Many students got the video game "fever" so arcades. Senior Bob Allen said he spent $5 to $10 a week, but he was trying to cut down.

Asked about their favorite arcade games, senior Bob Hewett replies, "Battlezone." Senior Bob Allen also liked Battlezone. Sophomore Dawn Kibbee liked Space Invaders, and Macheak preferred Pac Man. Junior Becky Wheeler liked Centipede.

Some symptoms of being an arcade freak were sore hands (commonly called Pac Man hand), going crazy at the Arcades and saving quarters.

The Wizard's Den seemed to be the favorite arcade of most Cedar Falls people, but for some arcade freaks, their favorite arcade was, "Anywhere I'm near or at."

Not only did students enjoy the machines, but others profited from them. Arcades made piles of money from the heavy use of their machines. Companies came out with all kinds of para-

stones remember iowa

The Rolling Stones ended almost 20 years of neglecting Iowa fans with a climatic and powerful performance in Cedar Falls November 20. It was their first return to Iowa since 1962, when they hit an Iowa nightspot on their first American tour.

Although CFHS students were not given advantage in the rush for tickets, most who wanted to go were able to obtain them. It was announced at 11 in the morning that tickets were "now on sale," and on the shocked UNI campus the scramble began. In a matter of two hours the supply was exhausted.

Undoubtedly this rock group has not grown old with age, although its members are nearing 40. The Stones still had all the style, talent and professionalism as they had when they began. What the Stones proved was they had everything it takes to get themselves billed as the greatest in rock and roll.

Mick Jagger, lead singer, pranced and strutted across the stage during the entire two-hour set. He demonstrated the energy of someone half his age — or younger.

The Stones greeted the crowd of 24,000 with "Under My Thumb." The opening chords came from Keith Richards, who also poured out the lead vocals on "Little T and A" later in the show.

Drummer Charlie Watts came through with a pleasing solo in "Beast of Burden." To leave no stone unturned, guitarist Ron Wood and bassist Bill Wyman kept the band tight. Wood gave searing leads while Wyman added the same kick as the others.

All in all, the concert consisted of old songs

mixed with newer songs from the latest album, "Tattoo You."

When the band exited, they left the audience wanting more. What the audience got was the sweat drenched boys with towels around their necks, a Union Jack and an American flag draped across Mick, and a more than satisfactory rendition of "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction."

Lead guitarist Keith Richards displays his talent to the many fans through the chords of his guitar.

Domestic exchange: Getting to know you

Pretzel vendors and corn-cob jelly, RHS and CFHS, Long Island and Effigy Mounds — how do these relate? All are memories of this year's Domestic Exchange.

Twenty-one CFHS students experienced Eastern life for a week, living in Ridgewood, New Jersey. Attending classes at Ridgewood High School (RHS), visiting New York City, shopping, partying and attending a Broadway musical were only the highlights of March 27-April 4 visit for CF students.

Although similar in size, RHS offered a more diversified curriculum. Courses pertaining to scuba diving, photography, humanities and other subjects not found in our school system were offered at RHS. Field hockey and soccer were offered as interscholastic sports.

Co-op programs were, in contrast, offered only at CFHS.

To complete the exchange, 19 students from New Jersey visited Iowa May 8-17, attending class but spending a majority of their time in other activities.

Full-day excursions to Des Moines and Northeast Iowa, including Effigy mounds and Villa Louis were taken and evenings featured social gatherings, drive-ins and tours of a farm, John Deere and UNI.

Sunday, May 17, came too soon for all participants. As our New Jersey friends were corraled into the waiting bus, promises of correspondences were exchanged with tears.

Artists teach students dance fundamentals

Students were treated to performances by a three-person dance company, the year's artists in residence.

Sherry Saterstrom, Valerie Williams and Vernon Windsor made up the dance company organized in 1977. Williams worked with students in gym classes and creative writing classes and also with the pompon girls. Saterstrom said, "One of the rewards of the program was to see students discover things."

The artist in residence program lasted 140 days and gave every student in the Cedar Falls schools the opportunity to see modern dance performed and to experience modern dance first-hand. In physical education classes, Williams inspired students and helped them relate modern dance to physical fitness and exercise. In creative writing classes, artists in residence expanded students' horizons, commented Erik Melberg, creative writing teacher.

The way you dress is a way of expressing yourself. This doesn't just include clothes: it's the perfume or after shave you wear, the type of shoes you prefer, and the colors that are your favorites.

Style can be defined as a way of dressing and accessorizing a way of looking as good as you feel. In truth, when you look good, you really do feel good. Bright colors add to this by boosting your spirits.

When you see pictures of yesterday's fads, you may wonder why you found them attractive. But when a fad is in full swing, it is highly desirable.

There is a difference between short-lived fads and long-lasting trends. Fads look fabulously new at the beginning of a season and old by the end of it, while fashion trends last longer.

Only time will tell which looks will die. Fads that have become fashion include blue jeans, bikinis, sneakers, t-shirts, athletic clothes and sweatshirts.

The rages in 1981-1982 were the preppy look, western wear, and when spring came into view, the sailor clothes.

Polo shirts began to take over featuring anything from alligators to horsemen. The colors were unlimited.

Sporting goods stores sold lots of clothes that looked super on the street. Many people wore the ever popular t-shirt and jeans combination.

Fashion goes western

The best of the west was with us. Until this year, "western" fashion meant cowboy gear to most people. For boys, the look didn't change much.

They went on wearing their boots, hats and cowboy shirts. For girls, however, things changed. The new western look was softer and more colorful. Cowboy looks were matched with prairie looks.

Prairie skirts were flowing and romantic. "Cow-girl" boots were worn with jeans as well as skirts.

What was up for footwear? It would be better to say what was down. Flat pumps came into fashion, ranging from metallic to delicate pink.

Heels were not as high as in previous years.

Clothes can be worn for several seasons without going out of fashion. Those who were not concerned with what was in style wore what they liked. They did not find it necessary to look through trade magazines to see what was "in."

A universal feeling concerning fashion was comfort. All in all, people had a lot of fun with fashion, because they had options and wore what they wanted.

Walking across the bottom of these pages are examples of the year's footwear from pumps to western boots.

At its most traditional, Cedar Falls High School was Homecoming, school plays, the variety show, Sadie Hawkins, Prom and graduation.

Predictable and expected, these were the landmarks of the school year. Although the actors' faces changed, the traditions continued, just as they had in the past.

But it was these traditions that helped to define school life and give it character for us. The school activities helped to reveal the personality of Cedar Falls High School.

And participating in its traditions helped us to feel part of them, to "belong."

Pep assemblies helped to generate school spirit and enthusiasm.

Anne Boerschel, who coached the girls' volleyball team said, "We didn't have a pep assembly on a day we had a meet, but I think the enthusiasm was carried over into our meets."

Richard Engel, boys cross country coach, said, "all the student involvement" was unique to the year's assemblies.

Gayle Bruene, who sponsored pompon and cheerleaders, said that this year the assemblies were different "because of all the school spirit."

Pompon girl Carolyn Madsen said she found it much easier to cheer this year. Barb Hansen, another pompon girl, said, "The crowds were more responsive this year."

Homecoming spirit-filled

Homecoming Week began Saturday, October 3, when students decorated the high school hallways and painted windows on the Parkade.

Seniors took first place in hall decorations with a display featuring 3-D paper trees and the theme "Fall Into a Victory." Sophomores won second place with a display of red and black which included painted windows.

Juniors took third place with their underwater theme, "Swallow the Cyclones."

Tuesday was Western Day and queen election day. Bill Weires was master of ceremonies for the special assembly. Each candidate had to answer questions and was required to make up a commercial with her escort. At the end of the assembly, students voted for their favorite candidate.

Students and staff had a chance to wear their favorite t-shirt and hat Wednesday. Thursday was dress-up day and featured the coronation assembly at 9:50 a.m.

1980 queen Laura DeGroote received a standing ovation from the crowd when she returned to crown her successor.

Halftime and more

The marching band and pompon squad came through with spectacular performances at home games in the UNI-Dome. Whether working together or separately, both groups were talented.

Although the number of people in band decreased, director Hugh Eicke commented, "They did an excellent job, improving each week." There were 70 band members plus the pompon girls and twirlers.

On the day before each home game, the marchers traveled to the UNI-Dome for practice during fourth hour. During the week, practice was held on the school football field. The Marshalltown marching band performed during halftime at the October 16 home game in the Dome.

Band entertainment was not limited to football games alone. Both the band and pompon squad traveled to the National Cattle Congress. They were also part of a Walt Disney promotion at College Square Mall.

At home they were involved with the Homecoming activities, playing in the parade and the snake dance.

The 20 Pompon girls performed at all home football games and at UNI. They went to a clinic in Monroe, summer camp in Ames and a contest in Pocahontas. The squad performed at basketball games and, for the first time, at wrestling meets. December 5 the team went to state in Des Moines.

Squad captains chose the material for routines. Ideas from other members were used as well. In Ames the squad won first place in dance, second place in pompon and third place in marching band. Senior Trudy Timm received honorable mention for her routine.

No pep assembly was complete without the band and Pompon squad. They added that extra frizz to the general mood throughout. The drums beat forcefully in the background started the hand clapping and feet stamping. The color of pompons flashing in the foreground added to the school spirit.

Unique play depicts love and life

"... I began to see! I didn't used to see. The street cars going by had people in them suddenly. There have always been people in street cars, but now they were beautiful people," said Agnes, who was one of the characters in the drama department's production of William Saroyan's "Beautiful People." Charles Koch directed the November 6-7 production.

'The Beautiful People'

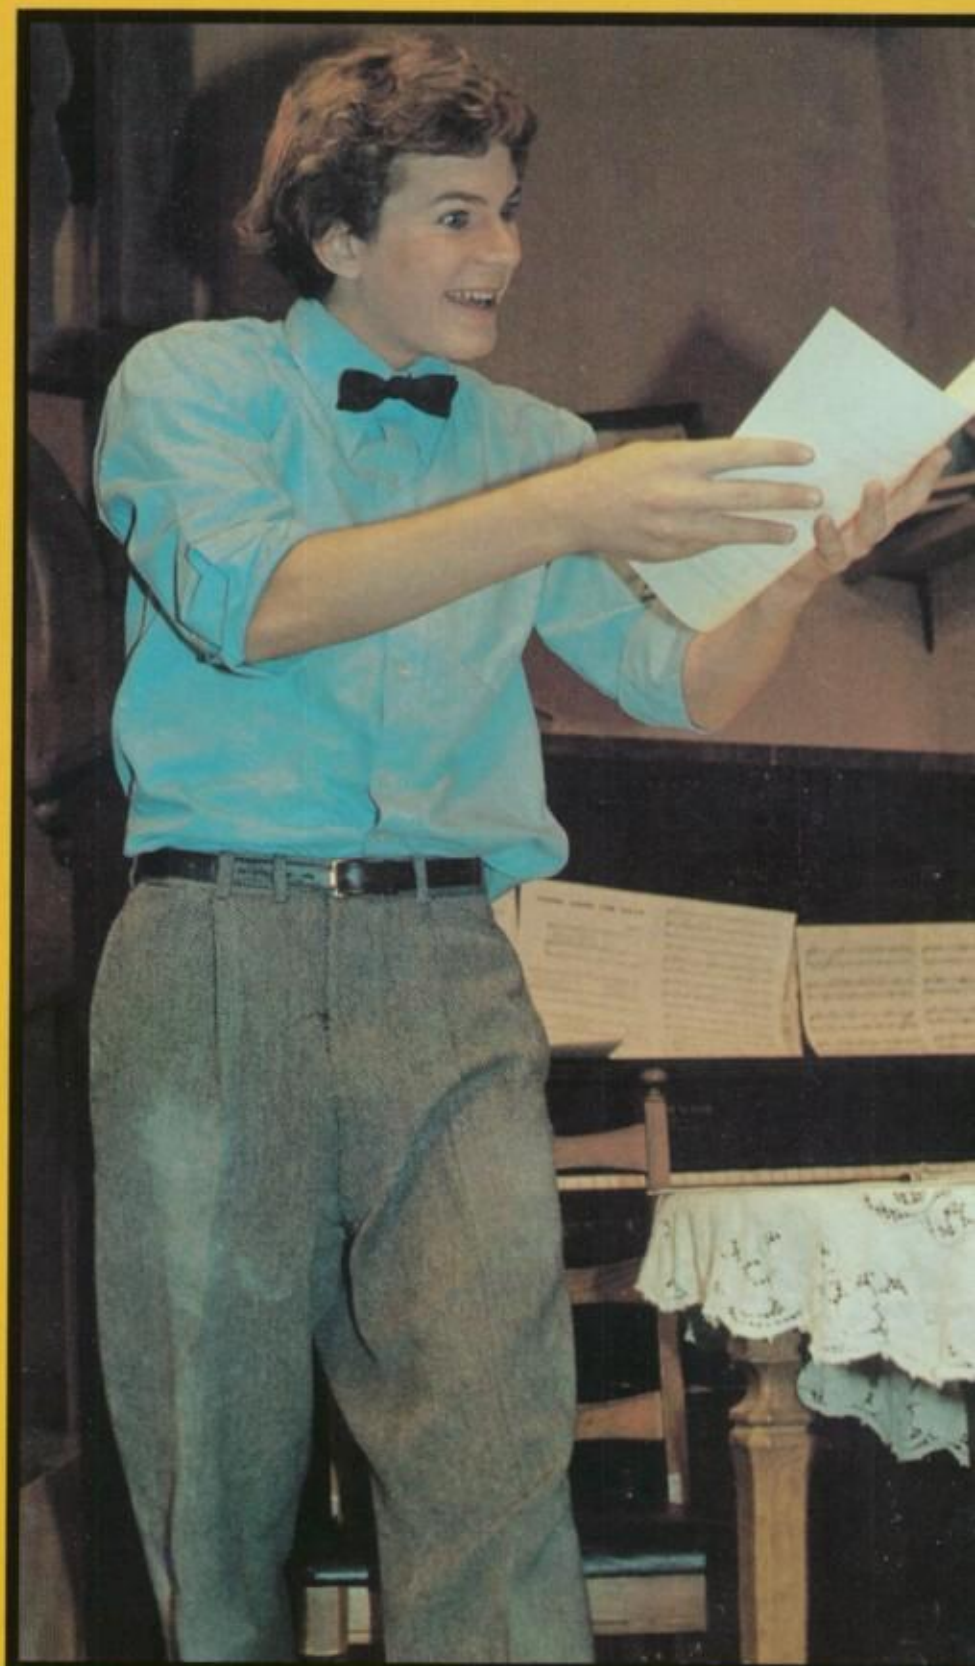

"Plot doesn't exist in this play," Koch said. "Saroyan created these people and through them he expresses life and love in a child's innocence. Outside of the rewarding experience of working with this cast, I've gained an understanding of Saroyan's humor and wit."

Heidi Noonan, who portrayed Agnes Webster, learned that "It's better to try to get along with everybody. Take things easy and things will come to you, especially love."

"The message of the play is that love is the only thing in the world that matters," said Koch, "and that love goes beyond pity and that pity-love is not real love for one's fellow man."

Appearing before crowds at sporting events was only part of the cheerleaders' job. Six squads were selected after tryouts in the spring, and the girls practiced every Sunday throughout the summer.

To raise money for their uniforms, the girls washed cars during the summer. During the school year the girls held bake sales and sold concessions. The varsity football cheerleaders won first place in large division competition at Cattle Congress. As first place winners, they received a trophy, $50 and tickets to a University of Northern Iowa football game.

Sophomore cheerleaders also won first place in their competition. They also received a trophy, $50 and football tickets. Some of the requirements for girls trying out were doing "Herky" and split jumps, doing loyalty and "rah yea" using gymnastics, learning a cheer taught by seniors and making up cheers. Each girl also had to pass a test over the sport.

Postponed show features variety

Rescheduled to January 25-26 because of a storm the previous weekend, the 1982 Variety Show had one of the greatest diversity of talent seen in many years, said director Merle Picht. Twenty-seven acts, selected at auditions, performed. The show included the Jazz Band and Jazz Singers, two rock bands, the pompon girls, the mime troupe and a magician.

Singing acts featured Lisa Laughlin, Laura Dotseth, Jayne Plantan, Tom Pardoe, Mike Bonner, Peg Mason, Linda and Laura Maughan, Marguerite Vance, Julie Van Der Meer, Paula Hansen and a quartet.

Dancing were Cindy Billard, Deb Irwin, Lisa Johnson and Romy Sutherland. Other acts included The Flying DeFunct Brothers, Lori Lohman on the piano, Ed Johnson on guitar, Dave Ohl and Brian Pedersen with puppets and Rhonda McCulloch on the banjo.

The show had three emcees — Mike Clapp, Jeff Mundt and Mark Nickel. Student coordinator was Dave Ohl.

"Having three emcees this year gave the emcees a better chance of learning more by not having all the pressure of the whole show," Picht said.

Although the show was postponed from the Friday - Saturday performances to the following Monday and Tuesday, co-director Chuck Koch felt that the delay didn't affect turnout greatly with about 1,800 attending the two nights. Koch felt that attendance could have been as high as 2,000. Picht said "This has been the best year yet, and I've had the best technical crew in the 30 years I've worked here."

Sadie Hawkins Day gave students a chance to act like kids and forget the pressures of school. They could let loose and forget their maturity.

Speech coach Marguerite Vance had a goal of making each student involved in speech a "better performer." To achieve that goal, Vance worked with each student individually as often as possible and spent hours on speech delivery techniques.

Tom Pardoe qualified for Nationals in Humorous Interpretation by winning a district championship.

DRACULA FEATURES SPECIAL EFFECTS

Amid blood and bats, the speech department presented "Count Dracula" by Ted Tiller.

The play was an adaptation of Bram Stoker's nineteenth century tale of the supernatural. Tiller's Dracula is set in the early twentieth century.

Dracula is a very difficult play for a high school to perform according to the play's director Charles Koch. "We did it because we had the people to do it."

The biggest technical problem with the show was the special effects. There were flash boxes, fog machines, objects and characters appearing and disappearing and bats flying across the stage and into the audience.

Perhaps the biggest problems with acting were timing and characterization. "The hardest part was getting the timing down to a 'T'," said Margaret Tedlie, who played the part of Sybil.

The play "had to move like a freight train," as Koch put it "And if the timing is not just right, it will not move."

Mina (played by Mary Jean Harrold) and Renfield (played by Ryan Love) changed their characters greatly during the course of the play. Mina had to change from a young girl in love with Jonathan to an evil monster under the powers of Dracula.

Renfield had to go from a schizophrenic under Dracula's control to a perfectly sane person.

Seniors eye end of year

As the year began to wind down, it became obvious that most seniors' minds were on one thing — graduation.

The final weeks of the senior year were highlighted by Prom. "Fantasies in the Sky" became reality May 8 at the UNI Commons. Promgoers enjoyed the music of Tennyson and received unique Prom favors — wine glasses stamped with the Prom theme and logo.

Work, college and senioritis beckoned as high school classes lost their appeal. Comments like "Where are you going to college?", "Have you got the job yet?" and "I can't take three more weeks of school" were heard frequently.

Although it seemed that graduation would never come, the calendar pages turned and the graduation events began.

Caps and gowns were distributed during seniors' last week of school. Graduates-to-be checked the marching order and learned by whom they would be sitting at graduation ceremonies.

Gloating over their junior and sophomore classmates, seniors finished their high school careers Thursday, May 27. Many returned to school the following day to clean out their lockers and attend to other business.

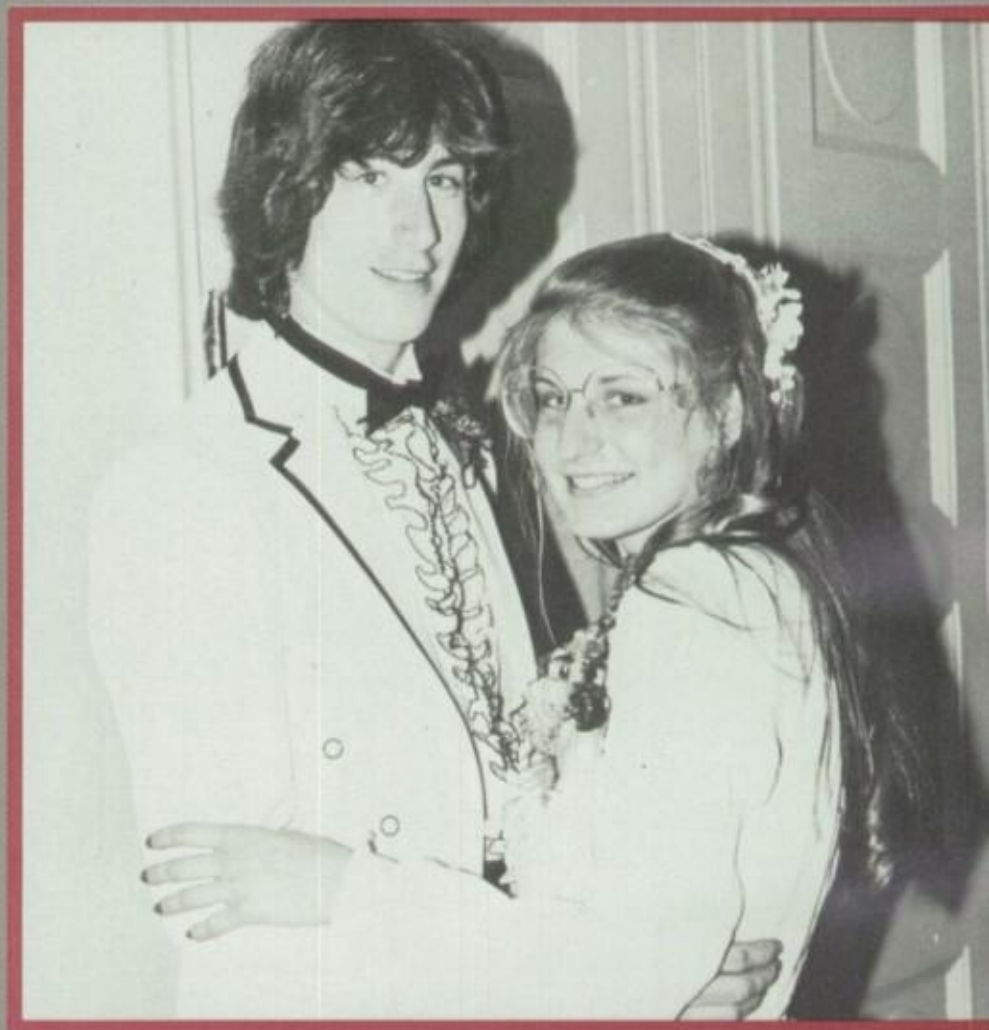

Class members convened Friday, May 28, for a senior breakfast at Maucker Union before graduation rehearsal in the UNI-Dome.

After posing for photos in their caps and gowns, seniors headed into the UNI-Dome Sunday, May 30, to convene for the last time.

Splashes of red were everywhere as class members made their ways up the hill to the Dome. Standing in the concessions area, 448 seniors awaited their turns to march to the UNI-Dome floor.

Inside, preparations were almost complete. Underclass band and orchestra players had finished tuning up, speakers had cleared their throats, and all was in readiness.

Led by junior class officers Scott Treiber and Kandi Krull, the class of '82 flowed down the steps in their scarlet gowns, looking like a red waterfall.

Seniors set free at last

Seniors lined up to the strains of "March Romaine" and took their seats to "Pomp and Circumstance."

Speakers took the stand and delivered their orations. The Rev. Dick Mason, pastor of Trinity Wesleyan Church, gave the invocation and benediction. His daughter Peg was among the graduates.

Deb Irwin addressed her classmates on the topic "What Lies Within Us." The title was drawn from the class motto, a Ralph Waldo Emerson quote, "What lies behind us and what lies before us are tiny matters compared to what lies within us."

The procession across the stage began as Principal Les Huth read the graduates' names.

Diplomas and handshakes were offered by school board president Joy Corning and board members Charles Officer, Gene Scheel and Dr. Jerry Jorgensen.

Responding to the moment in various ways, some graduates looked solemn, some grinned broadly, and others showed no emotion.

After the final student had received his diploma, the ceremony concluded. Almost hesitantly at first, then like an explosion, red caps flew into the air.

Hugs and handshakes were exchanged by graduates as they turned in their gowns. Heading home to receptions and other festivities, graduates had soon left the Dome empty and silent.

The scene in the parking lot was another story, however, as the traffic tangle lasted for almost an hour.

The traditional senior party began at 8 p.m. with bowling, dancing and eating among the activities which continued until the wee hours of the morning.

Stragglers home, members of the class of 1982 were now truly ready to go their separate ways.

5 students add international touch

Five foreign students spent the year at CFHS, displaying a wide variety of interests and participating in many of the school activities.

Anders Andersen of Denmark was an active photographer who participated in AV Club activities. He was also cast in "I Remember Mama," a production of the Cedar Falls Community Theater.

Cornelia Ganahl of Austria has studied German, English and French. While attending CFHS she was active in Varsity Choir and Chamber Singers.

Mark Joseph of Australia was involved in CFHS theater activities and played Father Hogan in the fall play, "Beautiful People." He was a member of the special effects crew for "Dracula" and participated in the Cedar Falls Community Theater. Mark also was involved with the domestic exchange and said his favorite thing about America was "TP-ing."

Cesar Waksman of Uruguay participated on the school's track team and played soccer with the soccer club.

Jose Gorriaz of Spain also went out for track and played soccer as a member of the CF Soccer Club.

Techies, actors win 'orders'

A long-standing CFHS drama department tradition, the Order of the Error, was presented to theatre students who made memorable mistakes.

After the closing performances of each play, participants balloted. "Winners" got to sign the shield on the stagecraft room wall.

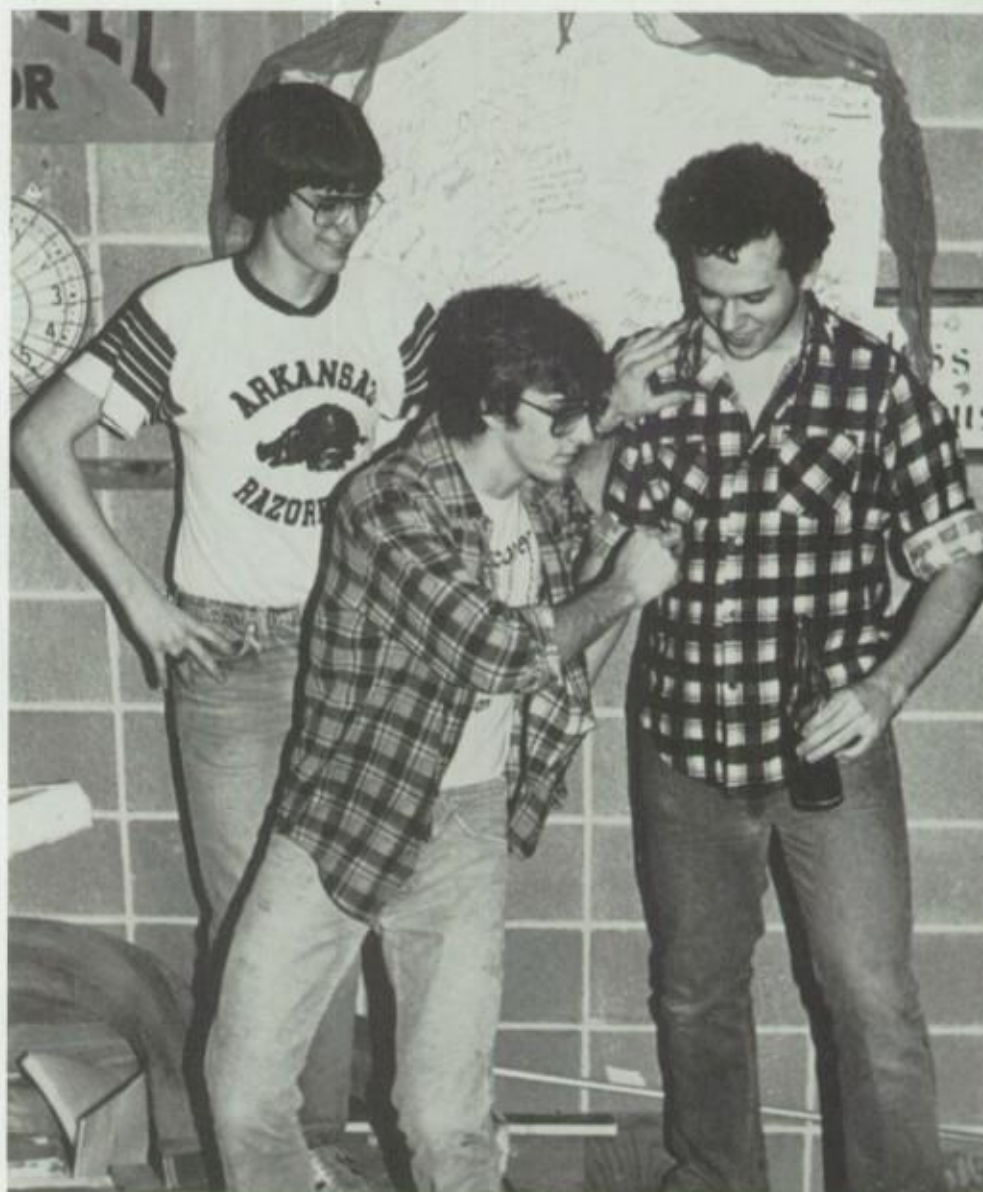

Dave Ohi and Brian Cox won the Order of the Error for the fall play, "The Beautiful People," when they closed the curtain too soon at the end of the act.

Ben Kieffer and Margaret Tedlie, who appeared on-stage, were "honored" after they edited out a sizeable portion of dialogue in the first act on opening night.

Winners for the spring play, "Count Dracula," were Mike Clapp, who tripped up the stairs, and Mark Joseph and Steve Obadal, who had a special effect bat fly backwards onto the stage after it had disappeared into the balcony.

Popular in '82

When spring rolled around, Billboard magazine said the top three songs were "I Love Rock and Roll," "Chariots of Fire" and "Ebony and Ivory." Billboard listed the top three albums as "Chariots of Fire," Joan Jetts' "I Love Rock and Roll" and the Go-Gos' "Beauty and the Beat."

A survey of CFHS students revealed their favorite books were "The Promise," "Yearbook" and "To Kill a Mockingbird."

According to the manager at Crossroads 7, the top three movies of early '82 were "Raiders of the Lost Ark," "On Golden Pond" and "Porky's." Students said their three favorite places were to a party, "the pits," drive-ins or "out on University Avenue."

Bestsellers help battle of bulge

S. Dean

As summer approached, more and more people were talking about their diets. Girls were worried about shedding the pounds they had "porked on" during the winter months, and said they wanted to look the best they could in their shorts, sleeveless shirts and swimsuits.

People tried a variety of popular diets. "The Scarsdale Diet," the number-one bestseller, promised a loss of up to 20 pounds in 14 days. On the diet, one was allowed a variety of food in certain quantities including lots of grapefruit.

"Dr. Atkins Diet Revolution" was another bestselling diet book. Dr. Atkins allowed people on the diet to have bacon and eggs for breakfast, plenty of meat and even salad with dressing. The objective of this diet was to eat no carbohydrates.

"The United States Ski Team Diet" was also popular. Dieters who liked eggs could really enjoy this diet, since they ate up to 30 eggs a week. Dieters were promised they'd lose up to 20 pounds a week on this diet.

TV star Richard Simmons inspired many Americans. His daily TV show featured a variety of diet tips. Many dedicated viewers watched faithfully.

His "Never Say Diet" book recommended low calorie food and lots of exercise.

But the essential thing to the success of any of these diets was dedication.

Sitting in the hall, Paula Hansen reads up on utilize diet techniques.

Love in the afternoon . . .

Will Erica marry Brandon? Will the Salem Strangler be caught? Where is Laura? What is the secret of the fire compass?

Every weekday afternoon loyal soap opera watchers gathered around the TV screens to try to learn the answers to these questions.

Lisa Paulson watched "because they were interesting." Sheri Minikus said she watched because "they were exciting."

Specific characters also drew students to soap operas. Many students followed the suspenseful and perilous actions of Luke and Laura of "General Hospital."

"It would be fun to live like they do, always on the run and doing something different," said Tom Kirk. Another character who saw a lot of action was Nola of "The Guiding Light." Many students watched "General Hospital" because they wanted to see the new radio and TV stars.

Students were attracted to soap operas not only because the characters led eventful lives and lacked morals, but also because soaps allowed students to escape their own "humdrum" lives and retreat into the lives of favorite soap characters.

Garfield, Smurfs become popular

Furry creatures that found instant popularity during the year were Garfield the cat and the wide range of Smurfs.

"They take on human characteristics," Stephanie Snyder said of the small blue Smurfs with white caps.

Smurfs could be found adorning everything from coffee mugs and t-shirts to record albums.

Smurfs were said to live in a village of mushroom houses where they were regularly threatened by an evil wizard named Gargamel.

Small Smurf statues portrayed the creatures in every activity imaginable — from musician to baseball player to baker. Each had its own personality — smart, wise, lazy or intelligent.

Garfield, a short, chubby, tiger-striped cat, was portrayed as always looking for something to eat, Laurie Boyer said.

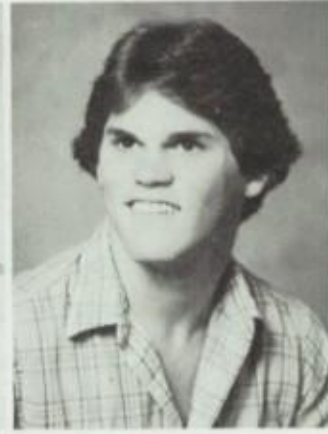

Always in trouble, "Garfield is cute and has a sense of humor that is out of this world," Sandra Houston said. Garfield's face and form could be found adorning everything from stickers and shoes laces to t-shirts and book covers.

"Big hairy deal" and "I hate Monday" were two of Garfield's most famous motifs.

Mary Jean Harrold cuddles a toy Smurf. Inset is one of the seemingly limitless poses in which plastic Smurf figures could be found.

Toma visit spurs drug awareness

Ninety-five percent of the student body and faculty attended a two-hour presentation by anti-drug crusader David Toma in the UNI-Dome Tuesday, January 26. Time was set aside at the end of Toma's presentation for students to discuss personal problems with him. Some students said Toma helped them to realize how serious drug problems are and can be.

Paul Dunbar, a local businessman, organized the presentation to bring Toma here. Dunbar also organized groups to raise money for the presentation. Altogether $13,000 was raised to bring Toma to Cedar Falls.

Principal Les Huth said, "Toma's important message has been able to get across to many students."

Tim Eckert thought the Toma presentation was good and said that he learned drugs can be more harmful than he had thought before.

Joe Bean said, "It was interesting. The examples that Toma gave caught my attention."

Leatha Davenport said, "I thought it was interesting. I think it was great because it helped people who had serious drug problems."

Matt Hoffey said, "It was good that he came and told the kids the truth about everything concerning drugs and alcohol."

Jeff Heckroth said he was very impressed with what David Toma has done with his own life. "I thought he had a good message especially the one, 'If you're gonna play, you've gotta pay.'"

Barb Hansen probably said it best, "Hopefully it reached some people."

Speaking at a news conference following his presentation to high school students, David Toma answers questions about drug abuse.

Fangs sharpen spring play

Imagine that you are putting on a play and you find that two of your actors need fangs. You can't just tell them to grow fangs like they can grow long hair or beards.

That was the problem that Charles Koch, director of the spring production, "Count Dracula," faced for two of his actors, Dave Ohl and Mary Jean Harrold.

To solve the problem, in mid-February Dave and Mary Jean went to see David Zwanziger, DDS, to see if he could construct a retainer-type piece of material with two extended canine teeth. After taking impressions of their mouths, Zwanziger made the fangs.

Although Zwanziger was not sure if the teeth would work as well as planned, both Dave and Mary Jean were pleased with their performance. Dave did, however, have his break during a dress rehearsal but they still worked fine.

Dr. David Zwanziger fits Mary Jean Harrold with a retainer holding fang-like teeth.

Constant concerts on video

MTV, video music on cable television, showed a wide selection of tapes from many different bands.

MTV was introduced in the metro area February 16. Cable subscribers paid an additional $5 hookup charge plus $1.50 a month for the service.

Bob Pittman designed the format for Warner Amex Satellite Entertainment Co. Pittman wanted people to have music any time they wanted it accessible 24 hours a day.

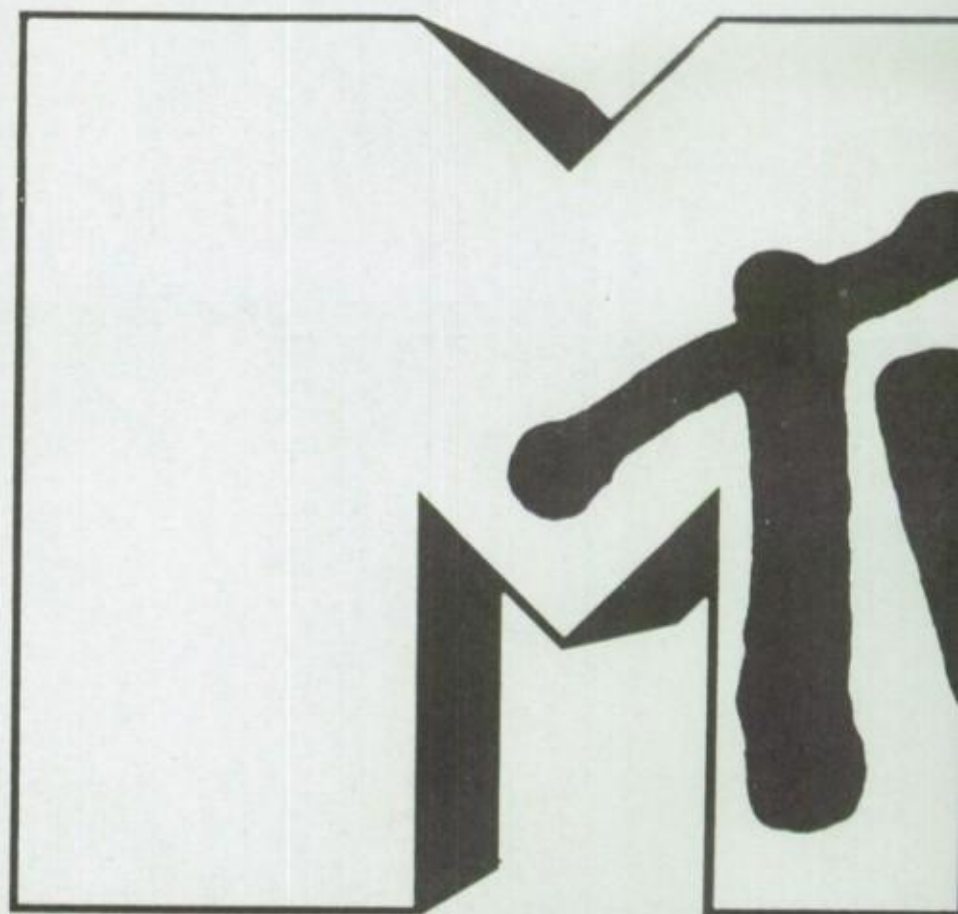

Most of the programming came from promotional video tapes supplied by record companies. Also shown were rock flicks and filmed concerts, along with some live broadcasts.

The show provided music news, interviews and concert date information on various artists supplied by VJ's (video jockeys).

Research indicated that nearly two-thirds of the audience had stereos in the same room as their television sets. Stereo hookups were made available, with an added cost, to improve the poor quality of the audio in most television sets.

Unlike radio, MTV was an experience in both sight and sound.

'And these are today's announcements'

To keep students and staff informed about school happenings, the daily bulletin was read over the intercom each morning during third hour.

Mark Nickel opened the year as official bulletin reader. When Nickel began rehearsals for the fall play, he was replaced by Mike Clapp.

Clapp said he enjoyed reading the announcements and the only thing he dreaded was waiting until time to "go on the air." The bulletin usually consisted of announcements of club meetings and reports of athletic or activity achievements.

Occasional "special announcements" by representatives promoting activities such as school concerts or dances featured humorous dialogues.

Third hour wasn't complete without words like, "Good morning. It's Friday, February 19, and these are today's announcements."

Beginning at the end of February, several students from radio production classes began to do some of the announcements as well. Following a Student Forum recommendation, the school experimented with reading announcements at the end of the hour.

Mike Clapp reads announcements to the student body at the beginning of third hour.

Friends mourn Lembke

Daniel Lembke, a member of the class of 1983, died of a self-inflicted gun shot wound June 5, 1981.

Friends said he had great potential and always cared for others.

Friends also said the thing they will most remember about Dan was that he had the ability to make people laugh and feel good.

"In death, he gave of himself the gift of life and vision to others; a personal sharing he found difficult to express to others in his own life."

Taped in Dome

National football rules film stars Tiger players, coaches

Miles of cable stretched across the playing field of the UNI-Dome as cameras videotaped a production by Cinema Associates.

The result, a football rules film starring the Cedar Falls High School football squad and coaches, will be scheduled for showing in schools across the nation.

Most of the film features 44 players and Coach Pat

Mitchell, but one scene includes the entire team and shows the varsity and sophomore football cheerleaders.

The videotape, which was shot in three days in mid-November, was to be transferred to film and released in the summer of 1982.

Sponsored by the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations, the film illustrates game situations and explains the football rules that apply to them.

Football players were excused from school for two days to participate in the videotaping. "Most of the time seemed to be setting up the scenes and checking the takes," one football player said.

After each take, members of the film crew checked the videotape to make sure it was satisfactory. Often the director ordered a retake and the Tigers had to run the entire play repeatedly to satisfy him.

The film was edited in Seattle, the home of the film company, and released before the 1982 football season.

Hawkeye fever runs rampant

Catching "Hawkeye Fever," students watched the University football team end the season with a trip to the Rose Bowl.

Asked what made the Iowa team so impressive, one Hawkeye enthusiast, Mike Peters, asserted, "The defensive unit — excellent coverage" and "Tippet is great." After the game, he planned to "have a Rose Bowl party."

Dan Trotter agreed that the defense was Iowa's strength, but added that ... "Dean is the outstanding nose guard."

Finally, early New Year's Day, festivities began with the 93rd annual Rose bowl parade. About 23,000 devoted Hawkeye fans traveled 2,000 miles only to see the sun set on their dreams of a victory. Iowa bowed 28-0 to Washington. The Hawkeyes ended 8-4 in their first winning season since 1961.

Dressed in appropriate attire, Karen Anderson reads her official Rose bowl picture book brought back by her mother Rosemary Anderson. Rosemary won the "Voice of the Fan" Register Contest and wrote columns for The Des Moines Register.

Hawkeyes to the coveted Rose Bowl.

The Hawks earned this honor only twice before, defeating Oregon State in 1957 and California in 1959. The 1981 Hawkeyes went into the game one-point favorites over the Washington Huskies.

Sweepstakes: The search for the winning ticket

It was always thought that the reason so many C.F. students went to Wendy's, McDonald's and Taco Bell during open lunch was the delicious food they offered.

Not true. The reason behind those daily treks to fast food restaurants was the fact that nearly everyone had the "Sweepstakes Epidemic."

Sweepstakes had almost become one of the American Ideals (along with Mom, the flag, apple pie and baseball), because this year nearly everyone had tried his or her luck at playing the sweepstakes games offered by fast food restaurants, grocery stores, gas stations and soft drink companies.

Pepsi-Cola, for instance, would give $1,000 to anyone who could find each of the NFL teams on back of the bottle caps. Pester gas stations ran a contest offering a new car to anyone who got game cards spelling "Pester."

At Wendy's one scratched off the gold squares with a coin, and for three of a kind, winners got $1,000. If you got three consecutive numbers, you'd win $100 and a chance for a drawing to win $50,000 and other cash prizes there.

Although the sweepstakes epidemic was exciting, not too many people came out winners.

The nearest that most people came to winning the "grand prize" was receiving a free order of fries or ten cents off on their next purchase.

"I like playing sweepstakes games, but they influence us to go back too much," says Kris Tressler, who played at Hy-Vee and McDonald's.

Jane Huebner didn't like playing sweepstakes games. "We always came so close in the Hy-Vee game, but never won. It's frustrating," she said.

When asked if they knew anyone who has won the Big Prizes, Sue Uhlenhopp stated that a relative won free groceries.

"I play them mostly to win a small prize or a coke," said Kathy Kennedy.

Lori Witzel and Lisa Ver Mulm play "mucho mucho give away" from Taco Bell.

Classmate killed in accident

RAY RICE

Ray Rice, a member of the class of '83, was killed Saturday, March 27, when he lost control of his car on Ford Road, near Janesville.

A trombonist, Ray was active in instrumental music as a member of jazz band, pep band, orchestra, marching band, symphonic band, wind ensemble and the brass sextet.

"He was a happy go lucky sort of guy," band director Hugh Eicke said. "He got a new horn as a sophomore, which shows a lot of interest. He was really improving in his playing. He was on his way up."

"He wasn't an outgoing kid," guidance counselor Bud Nichols said. "He was quiet and very active and interested in music."

Memorials were given to the music department in Ray's name. Over $300 was contributed for the purchase of band and orchestra music.

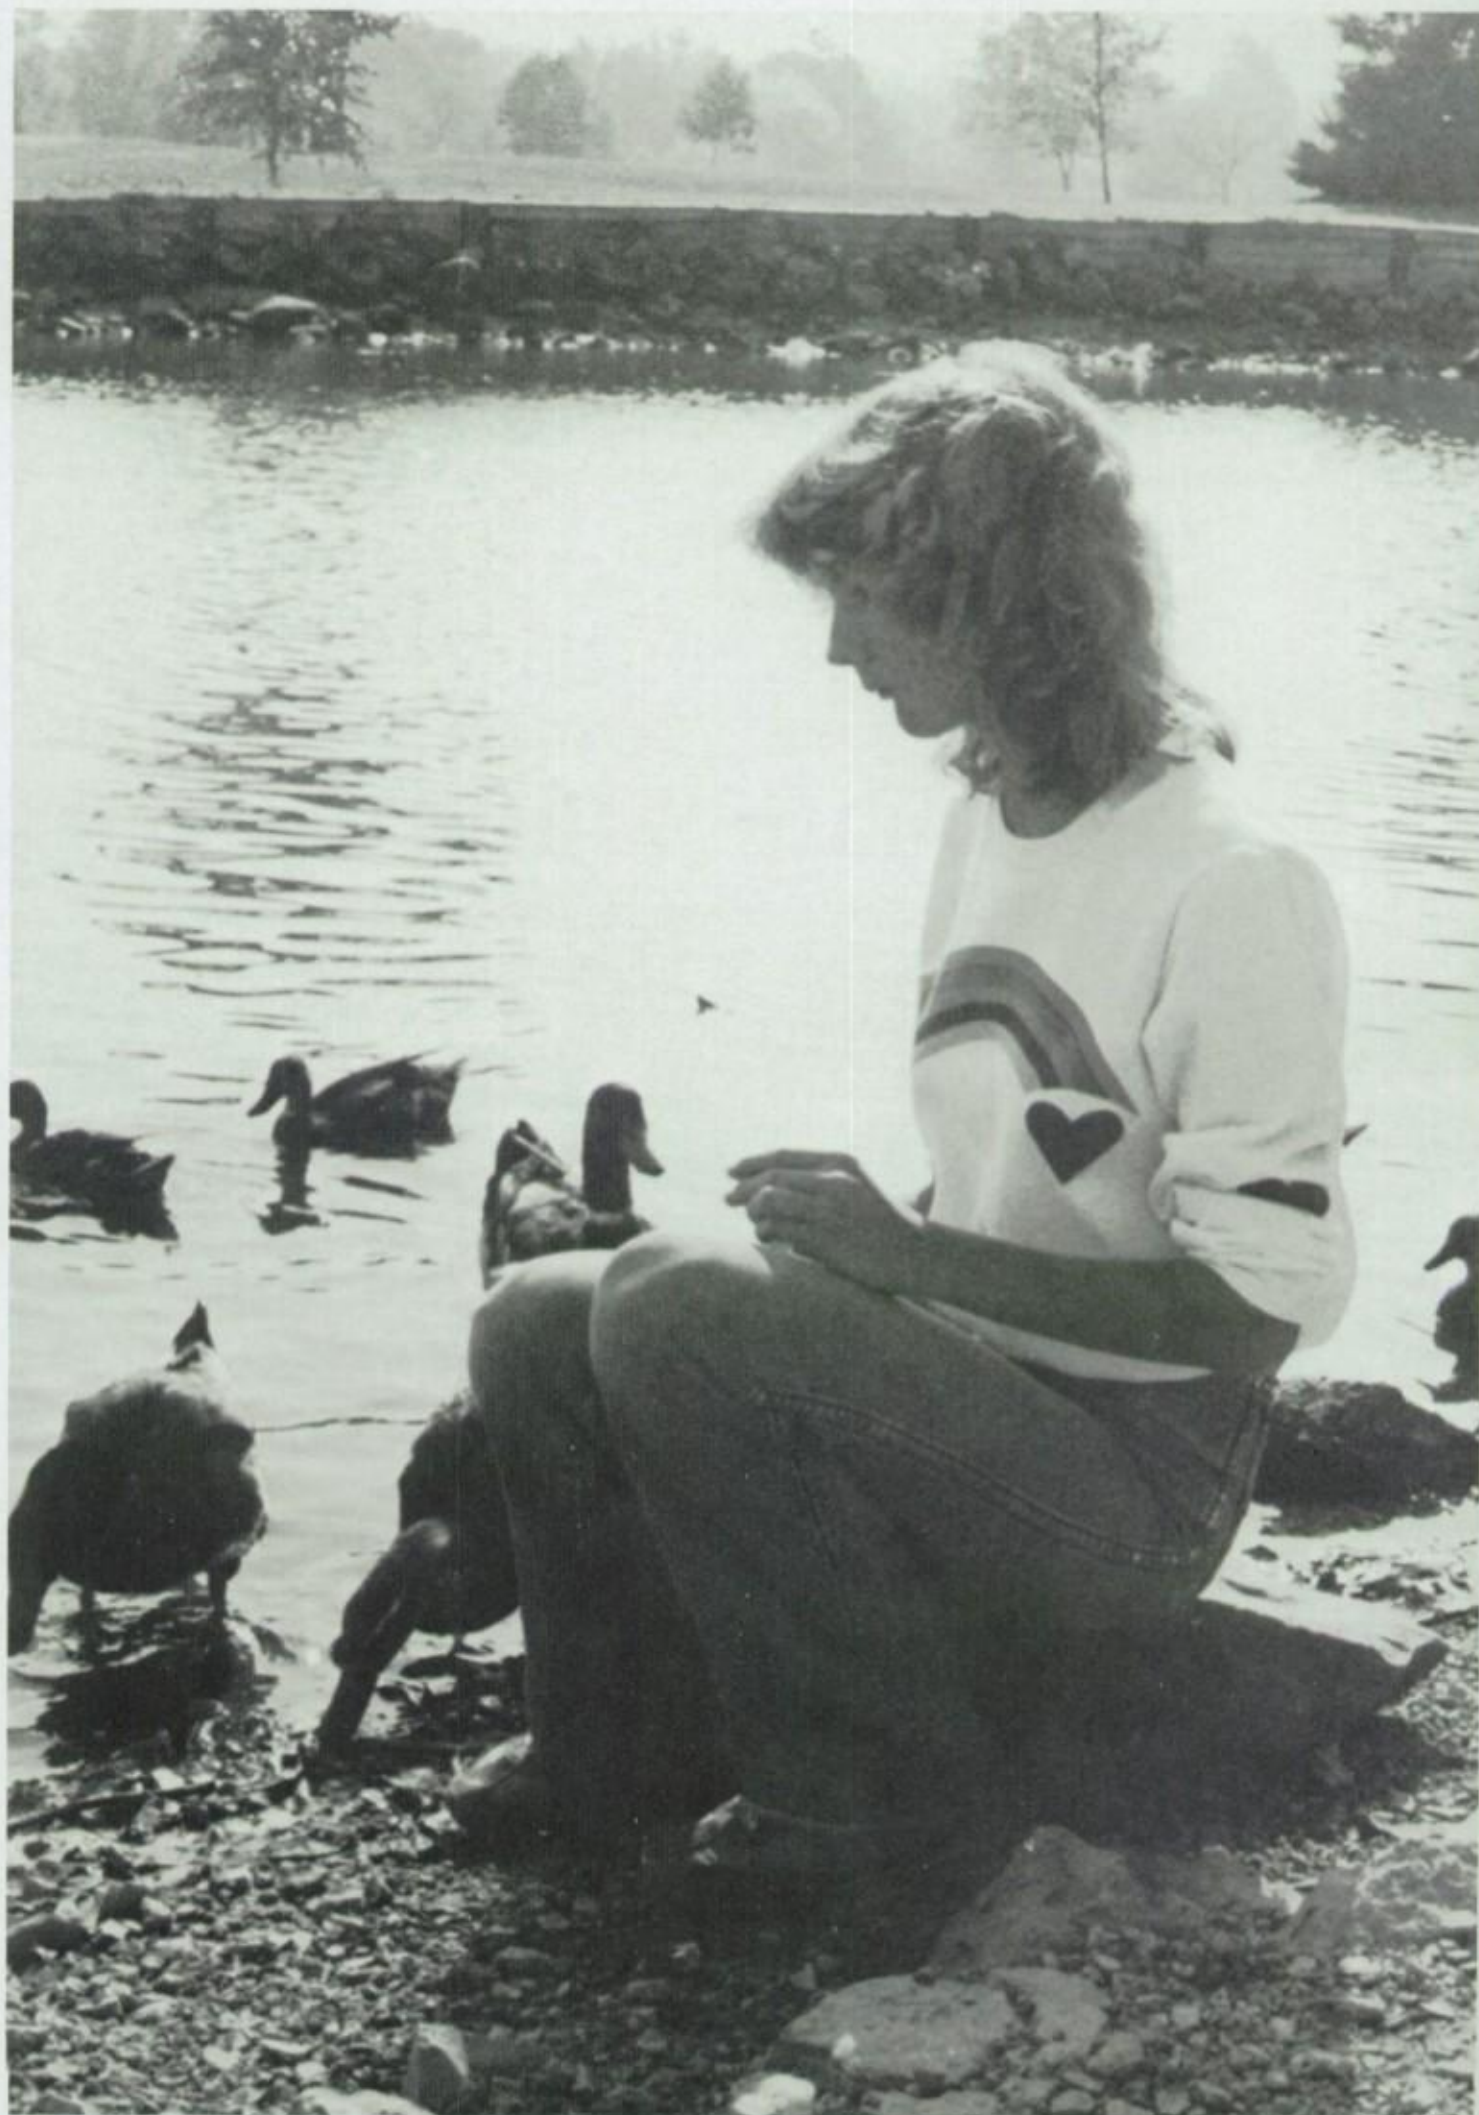

Budget cuts force creative activities

Because of budget cuts which made bus transportation unavailable for gym classes, teachers were forced to find other activities for their students. Students no longer bowled at Valley Park Lanes or played tennis at the UNI-Dome or Birdsall courts during gym.

The annual ski trip to Waverly for seniors was discontinued. Bike riding to Washington Park, Birdsall Park, McDonald's and other nearby sites in Cedar Falls and playing challenging card games like Pepper and 500 were examples of replacement activities.

"It's really a shame that the funds aren't available and the kids can't do as much as they've been able to do in the previous years," said Anne Boerschel, gym teacher.

Senior Julie Stockdale feeds the ducks at Washington Park while on a bike trip in Anne Boerschel's third hour gym class.

incredible shrinking lunch

S. Dean

Everything about the school lunches seemed to be shrinking — from the number of students eating to the amount of food being served.

The only thing that was not shrinking was the price, which increased from 55 cents to 95 cents for a daily meal. The school was forced to raise lunch prices due to a decrease in federal aid. Because of the price increase, 20 to 25 percent fewer students ate school lunches in the system this year, according to Fred Wessendorf, director of business affairs.

"I think the prices are quite high, but you can't go out to eat for that price. Sometimes they don't give you enough food and other times they give you too much," said Laurie Powers.

Christine Fuller agreed that "Some days you hardly get anything to eat and others you get quite a bit."

Students agreed that the amount was fine for the price, saying it was hard to find any other place serving a full meal for 95 cents. But many students wanted more than school lunches gave and lunches just didn't seem to fill them up.

Wessendorf said proposed revisions of minimum school lunch guidelines were dropped, and he didn't expect more program changes in the near future. He noted that the school district did not reduce the size of portions being served this year.

The cafeteria seemed to be a convenient place to eat rather than going out to eat every noon. Some students like Peg Mason didn't want to eat lunch at all and preferred to study over lunch time. Melinda Lourie liked the fact that the lunches were hot when served. Joe Bean said he "liked the variety and the different choices you got."

Many students complained about the taste and appearance of the food. Others ranged from being required to stay in the cafeteria to the amount of food that the school must prepare.

Since fewer lunches were sold, lunch workers' hours were reduced. No one was laid off from the school food service program.

Not only staff, lunch amounts, and students buying decreased but guidelines for free lunches were raised. The maximum income last year was $10,250 compared to $10,900 this year. Students with family income under $10,900 could qualify for free lunches.

Solving the puzzle: the Rubik cube

A new craze began with the seemingly impossible Rubik's cube. block to swivel and turn, which was needed in order to solve it.

It caught on so much, in fact, that millions of cubes were sold to curious customers all around the world. The Rubik's cube is a block of different colored squares with the objective to get each side of the block the same color, something which tended to be difficult for most people.

The actual number of potential combinations, other than the correct one, is 43 quintillion — which is 43 followed by 30 zeroes.

The puzzle was designed by Erno Rubik, an architect and teacher in Budapest, Hungary. The block was designed with a built-in mechanism to allow the

A book called, "The Simple Solution to Rubik's Cube," by James G. Nourse, was published for those people who really wanted to solve the cube. It was said to be guaranteed to solve any cube no matter how jumbled. The book offered clear and steady progress and featured rules that were easy to memorize. Some students had their opinions of the cube.

Christy Bess said, "I'd like it a lot better if I knew how to do it."

Kathy Franke said, "It's interesting and fun to do. Once you've started, it's hard to put down."

Between classes . . .

Imagine this . . . You are walking down the hall to your class, and straight ahead of you are two people engaging in a physical goodbye. How do you feel?

Associate Principal Dean Dreyer said that he feels "embarrassed, not for myself, but for the people involved! Because of my background and moral views, kissing and showing affection is a personal thing and should be expressed that way."

Study hall supervisor Linda Moon, on the other hand, claimed she was jealous! "My partner isn't that affectionate in public," she said.

Merle Picht, speech department chairman, simply said "YUK!" The reason he gave was "The same reason I don't like to watch people brushing their teeth. I am in favor of both, but one must choose the right time, the right place, and of course the right person or brush."

Public displays of affection don't really bother her personally, gym teacher Anne Boerschel said, but, she said, "There is a time and a place for everything."

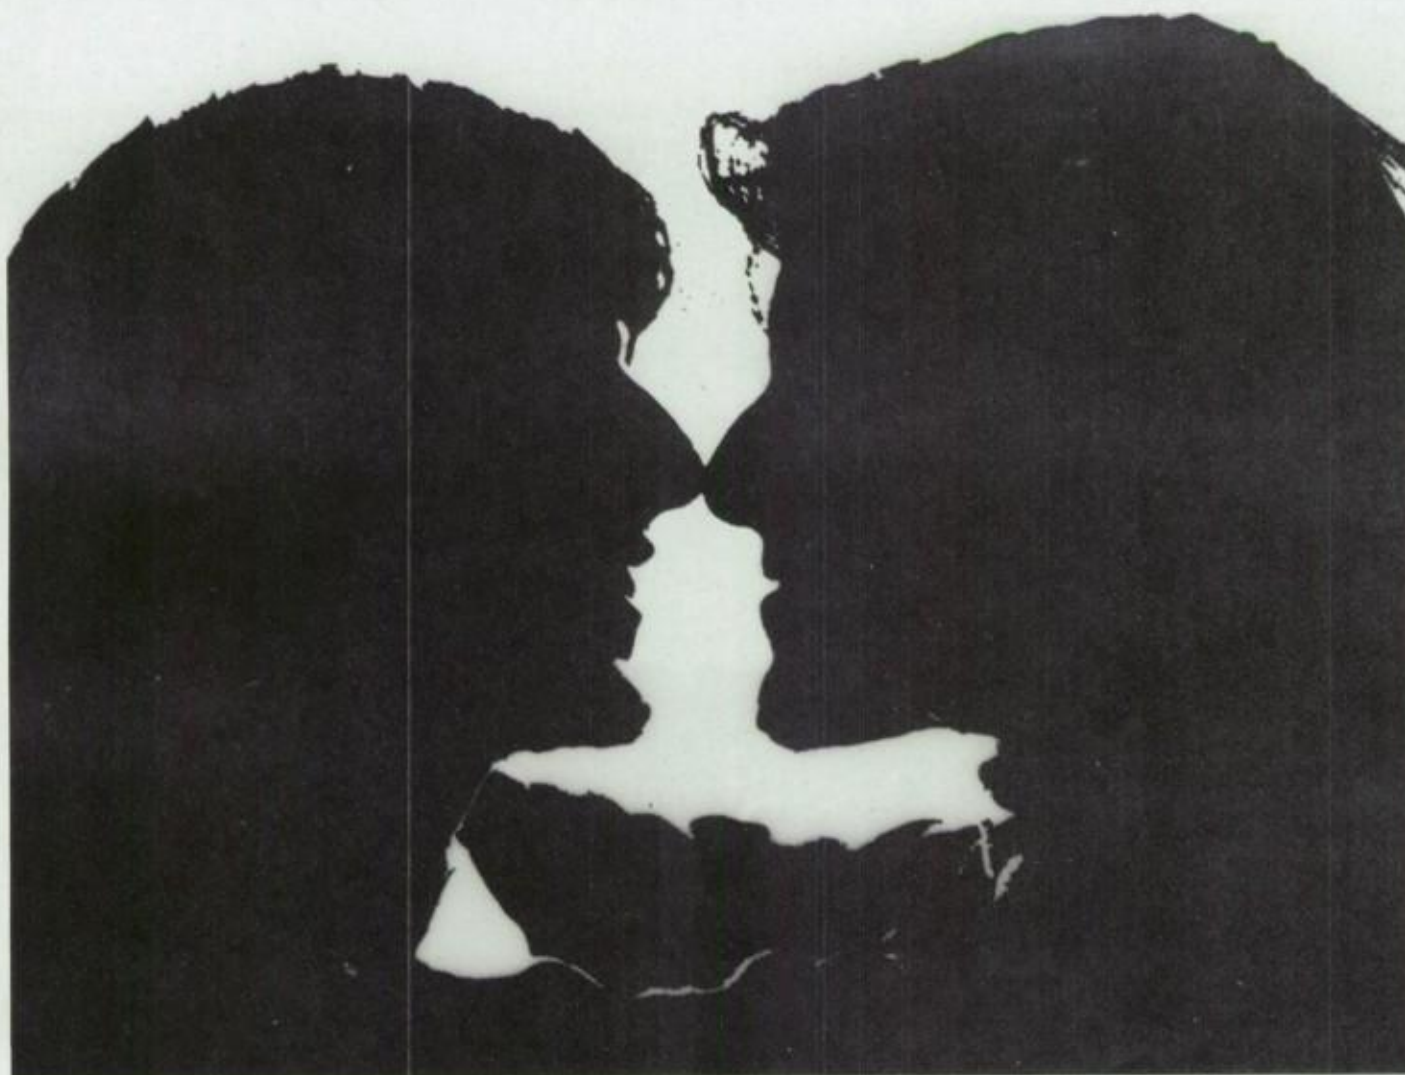

English teacher Judy Timmins disapproved of such actions. "I feel it is totally out of place. After all, the couple will only be apart for fifty-five minutes.

"They have the evenings and weekends for such private matters," she said. "Some of the kissing is not as bad as the other things that accompany it — the groping and the French kissing."

Penny Seufferlein said, "I think that every once in awhile is okay but SMUT isn't all that appealing. It can be embarrassing, but it is also funny. At least the two people care for each other."

Linette Riley joked, "It's okay as long as the partners aren't the same sex."

One student exclaimed, "I wish I were the person being kissed, because I'm deprived!"

Attendance ranks among best in state

More than 95 percent of CFHS students were in school on a normal day. Associate Principal Dean Dreyer said, "This is one of the best rates in the state."

Dreyer said he dealt with the other five percent on an individual basis. Sooner or later, though, the individual would lose his privileges for tardiness or unexcused absences. When a student lost his privileges, he was assigned to the restricted study hall. The student would remain there for a minimum of 4½ weeks.

Barb Garrison, who early in the year had charge of the study hall, said there were an average of four people in there an hour.

"They were supposed to use the time for a quiet study," Garrison said. She contacted teachers to get assignments for students in restricted study hall.

The school carried out the attendance policy seriously because administrators felt the school had an obligation to parents.

Dreyer said, "For the best education, you need to be in class as much as possible."

Some students said they liked to skip one hour with their friends usually to get something to eat, drink or smoke.

Most students skipped what they considered their simplest classes such as gym and study hall because "they are the easiest to get out of," one said.

Simulating the lack of freedom many students felt when confined to restricted study hall is Barb Garrison, who supervised restricted study hall. Garrison poses in a cell at the Cedar Falls city jail.

Chewing: Good taste against the rules

Tobacco and chewing became a big thing at Cedar Falls High. Many reasons were given for chewing. Some of these are, "It tastes good," "You get a buzz" and "It's satisfying and relaxing."

Bob Bisbee said, "It gives me a full tobacco flavor with out lighting up."

Skool was most favored by chewers who said they liked its mildness, with Copenhagen and Red Man next "because of the stronger flavor." Most chewers said they chewed everyday or whenever possible.

People have various reasons for not chewing. Jim Rule said, "I don't care for the taste." Two other reasons given were "It's worse than smoking," and "It makes some people sick."

"I started in seventh grade when I chewed to be 'Cool,'" said Brad Lybert "but when I found out it wasn't so neat and the time came to quit I found it hard and have been chewing ever since."

Chewing tobacco in school was against school rules as was treated the same as smoking in school. Punishment ranged from a warning to suspension, Associate Principal Dean Dreyer said.

Teachers reveal private lives

In their spare time teachers enjoy hobbies ranging from camping and cooking to boating and bell-ringing.

"I like the complete change of pace," explained English teacher Mary Smart, who said she enjoys the peacefulness of sailing on smooth water rather than the noise of a power boat.

The boat, a 27-foot Balboa, is affectionately named "White Knuckles" after her philosophy of sailing in a strong wind. It is harbored in Egg Harbor, where long weekends often find Smart and her family sailing on Green Bay.

English teacher Robert Loslo enjoys gourmet

He shares in the cooking responsibilities at home regularly.

Some of his specialties are roast duck with currant sauce and Chicken Pontaliba. He also enjoys "lots of pasta."

His gourmet cooking isn't limited to dinners at home. For the last five years, Loslo and Marguerite Vance have put on a special gourmet picnic each summer for their spouses and another couple.

Always included in the menu are hors d'oeuvres, soup, a main course and dessert. Asked why he enjoys gourmet cooking, Loslo replied, "It's creative and helps me to unwind."

Math teacher Karen Doetseth first started in her church's bell choir six years ago.

When the choir first started, she said she didn't feel like she had the time to be in the choir with all of her other hobbies. But after a few years, one of the members had to quit the choir and asked Dotseth to replace her.

Dotseth said, "I enjoy music and physical activity, and the bell choir combines both since I have to lift the big bass bells."

Anne Boerschel and her husband have owned an airplane since 1970. They now own a 1975 model.

She said, "It is an expensive hobby, but it opens many new horizons. How many people can go to Wisconsin for dinner and be back for school the next day?"

She and her husband, the pilot, go to Arizona for a weekend to visit relatives, a trip that would take others a week to make.

John Mullan mixes up a batch of his famous chocolate chip cookies.

Violin restoration and repair is one of David Page's hobbies. He also plays the violin for relaxation.

"I would still consider wrestling a major hobby, but lately I have become interested in gardening and fishing," said Keith Young, a three-time national wrestling champion.

He started wrestling as a senior in high school, the first time his school offered the sport.

The self discipline wrestling requires makes the sport appealing to Young. The coaches and athletes all have to discipline themselves, he said.

Getting to practice and following the rules specified at the beginning of the season are only a few of the many things that a wrestler has to do.

Science teacher Frank Buxton started cooking wildlife as a fishery biologist in Florida.

"I didn't like doing dishes, so I cooked," he says. Some of the things he cooked were turtles, and an alligator tail, which, he said, "tasted like a pork chop soaked in fish slime."

Once, when two former students lived with him on Cottage Row, for two weeks they ate nothing but the game they had hunted.

Buxton especially likes to eat walleye, pike and beaver.

Hobbies help teachers unwind

At the end of a long day, staff members, like students, turned to hobbies for relaxation.

Cindy Billard, who taught French, said ballet is a kind of exercise that's creative. "It's a great learning experience to do others' versions and you never stop learning," she said.

She started dancing at age 12 when she lived in New York. Billard took one year of lessons with a member of the New York City Ballet. She attended New York State University at Geneseo.

Later, when Billard had finished her masters degree and wanted an exercise program, she returned to ballet.

Billard, a member of the Northeast Iowa Dance Company and Metro Dance Theater, performs for various groups in the area. She was a member of the dance group, Orchesis, at UNI and was in the Waterloo Community Playhouse production of "Oklahoma!"

Pincipal Les Huth started riding a motorcycle in 1975. His first motorcycle was a mini trail bike and after he felt comfortable on that, he bought an XL-175.

Huth tried cycling when a friend who lived in a rural area kept encouraging him to come out to try riding.

At first Huth only rode on paths, but now he said he rides around town to give his kids rides. Huth said the thing he likes most about riding is "being out in the open."

He also rides his cycle to school.

"I like to act, to create a character and to watch the character grow," said Marguerite Vance.

When Vance was 12 years old, she started her acting career, and during high school she had a number of roles.

In college, she originally majored in theater. Vance has been in TV commercials for Balko's Furniture, Happy Chef, Esco and Roberts Decorating.

She has also done a few radio spots in Arkansas. Vance says, "Commercials are fun because it's me selling something." Vance also published her first book, called Scarlet Storm in 1981. "Dialogue is the easiest part for me," she said, "because it's just like acting."

Business education teacher David Heeney bought his first horse ten years ago.

Although his major hobby is coaching, Heeney now has two registered Appaloosas and one registered quarter horse. "Riding is something fun and different to do and it's something my wife and I can do together."

Head custodian John Scott is a rollerskating buff. He started skating at 13.

He owned rinks at Osage and Carroll at one time.

"I think skating is a sport both children and adults can come together and enjoy. Many hobbies are very expensive, but skating is not," he said.

"If you were to go bowling, it would cost you a lot more than skating. In skating, you pay one price; for other sports, you pay by the hour."

He said one of his favorite quotes was "For Health's Sake Rollerskate."

"It's beautiful. If you treat wood right, you can really bring out its beauty," said speech teacher Merle Picht.

He was first introduced to woodworking by his father. Since then, it has occupied much of his free time.

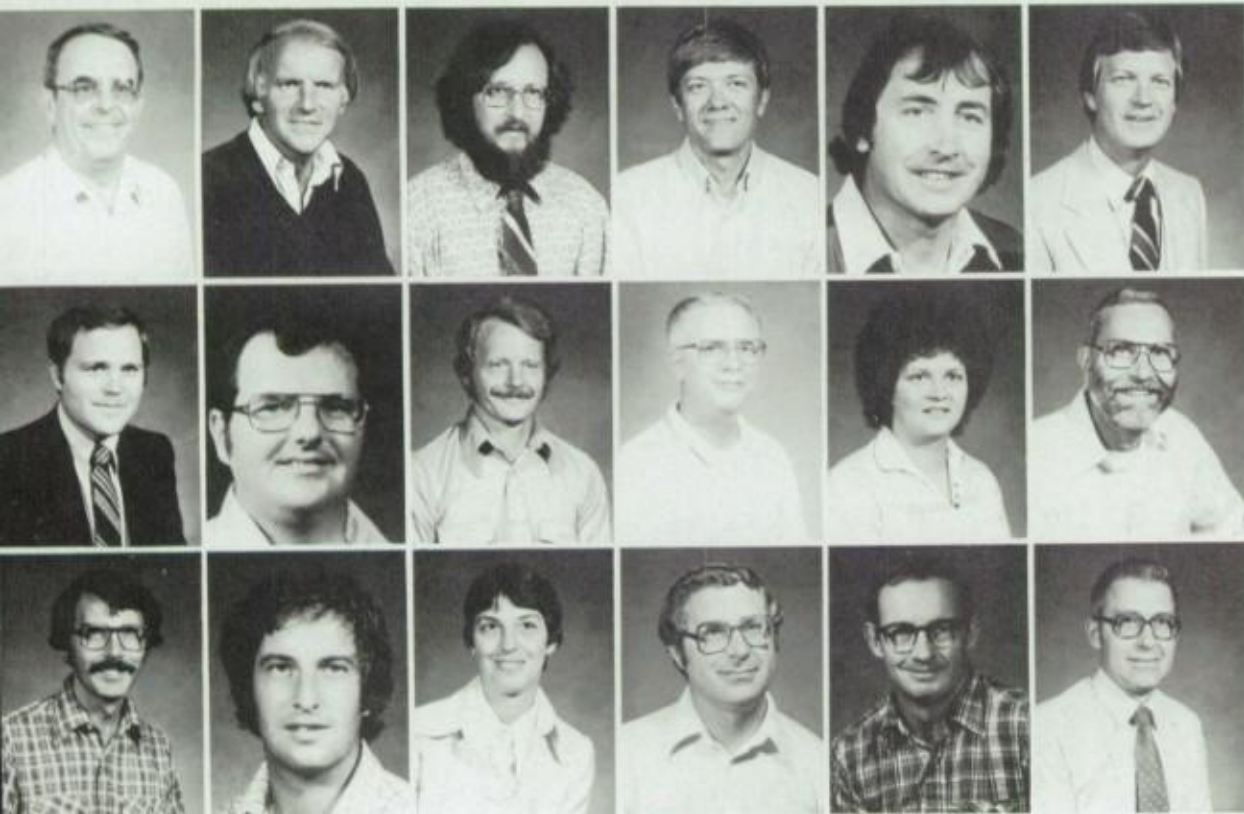

One of Picht's projects has been making lawn furniture from redwood scraps. His main source of materials has been scraps. "Making something useful gives you a good feeling," Picht said.

Rehearsing for the variety show, French teacher Cindy Billard poses at dress rehearsal.

Singing "Honeybun" from the musical "South Pacific," English teacher Marguerite Vance appears in the variety show. Vance played the lead in the Waterloo Community Playhouse production.

Hobbies fill teachers' spare hours

Guidance Counselor Jerry Purcell a self-taught painter, tries to paint every day, and sells paintings at art shows. Most of his paintings are of wildlife, but he also does rural scenes and some still life.

An avid supporter of athletics was home economics teacher Ann Eades. On the day of every football game, she wore red and black. "It is a good tradition and keeps the interest up," she said.

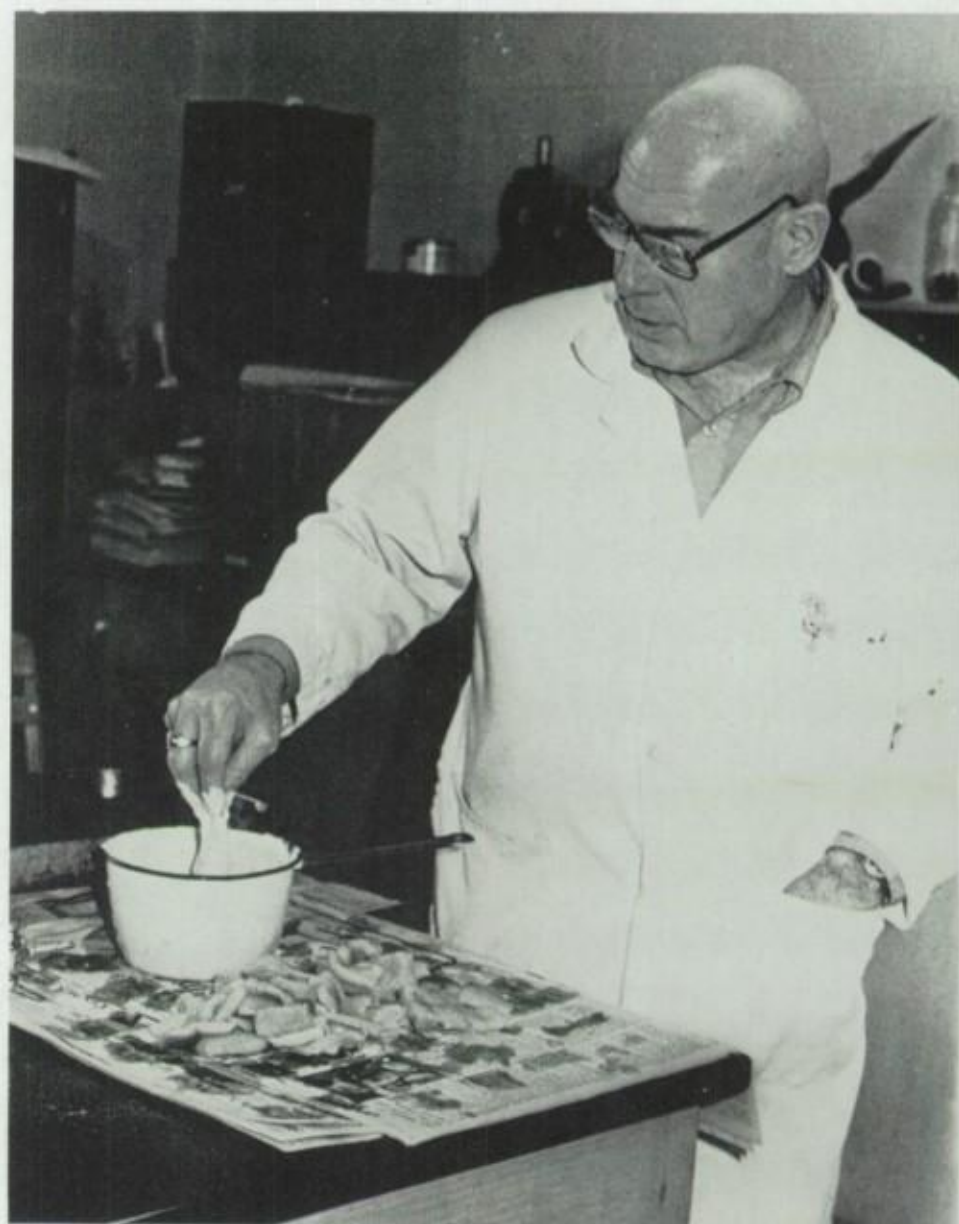

Marianna Delafield enjoys her work so much she considers working her hobby. An art teacher, Delafield's favorite activity is making puppets. She teaches classes on making puppets and has displayed her work in puppet shows.

Askier is physical education teacher Phyllis Ver Ploeg who learned to ski about five years ago. Skiing can be expensive so "V.P." has some advice for those who are interested. "Wait for the sales; you don't have to buy everything all at once."

Nancy Newton, counselor, is a cross-country skier. She likes cross-country skiing because "you can do it anywhere — even in your own back yard — and at your own pace."

Fish and wildlife instructor Frank Buxton dips fish in batter before preparing it for a class. During the semester, Buxton prepared rabbit, raccoon, venison and carp.

"Our major accomplishment this year was not having to cut out areas which students would like to continue," said Floyd Winter, director of secondary education.

Instead of making major cuts in staff and course offerings, the school board successfully accomplished holding on to "what they had," Winter said.

Because of continuing enrollment declines, Winter expects further funding reductions in the future. "With more cuts next year, we hope to accomplish the same thing," he said.

"What we want is what's best for the students, and cutting out courses isn't," he said.

Thrilling upsets and exciting individual performances highlighted the year in sports.

Narrowly missing the playoffs, the football team went 7-2. Fans went wild as the team upset number-one-ranked Fort Dodge.

Wins over Marshalltown and Fort Dodge, both ranked in the top five, topped the boys' basketball season. The girls' highlight was a last-second win over Fort Dodge.

Dawn Lentsch won the state cross country title, and Mark Ahrenholz won the conference tennis singles championship to highlight individual performances of the year.

In the best track season in years, boys won five meets, including their first Big Five meet since 1969. Girls turned in the state's fastest times in both the distance medley and two-mile relays, qualifying for state in five events.

Tigers share Big 8 crown

Making a strong bid for a playoff berth, the football team kept fans excited throughout the season, finishing 7-2 in a three-way tie for the Big Eight Conference title.

After losing the season opener to top-ranked Cedar Rapids Washington, the Tigers went on to upset number-one-ranked Fort Dodge. They beat all three Waterloo schools.

The Tigers' overtime victory over Marshalltown in the Dome was one of the most exciting games of the season.

Their 31-8 loss to Mason City dashed the Tigers' hopes for an undisputed conference title and an automatic playoff berth. Coach Pat Mitchell said, "All the mistakes of the season popped up in one quarter of this game."

Sixty-five players lettered at the varsity level including thirty-six underclassmen.

Steve Madsen broke the school's record for most quarterback sacks with 8½. Scott Engen tied the record for most kick team tackles with 22.

"Most valuable" awards went to Mark Caballero, offensive player; Doug Svobodny, offensive back; John Downs, receiver; Bill Weires, defensive player and defensive lineman, and Taylor Pine, defensive back.

Dave Ohi was named most improved offensive player, and Scott Eades, most improved defensive player.

Dave Griffith, who was injured in the October 1 game and missed the last half of the season, was selected captain.

Pine made third team all-state on defense. Caballero, Downs, Mike Griffith, Weires, Eades and Pine made all-Big Five.

Sophomores win Metro championship

The sophomores won the Metro championship by beating West, East and Central.

The highlight of the season was the Central game in which the sophomores came from a 20-0 deficit to win 35-20.

Coach Harry Anderson said, "Though we would liked to have had an undefeated season, the coaches worked more at developing skill that would be used in the next two years at the varsity level." Their overall record was 3-5-1.

Anderson added that the sophomores made a lot of mistakes which caused the loss of some key games.

Anderson said quarterback Rick Majerus and running back Doyle Hansen had outstanding years. Tom Kirk, Jeff Klepfer, Scott Peterson, Troy Rohde and Mark Rolinger were outstanding in the offensive line, Anderson said.

He said Jon Conradi, Ken Lawson, Bryant Pierson, Andy Seichter, Joel Snodgrass, Tyrone Sutherland and Brett Walker excelled on defense.

Lentsch goes unbeaten

The cross country season ended victoriously for both the boys' and the girls' squads.

According to boys' Coach Rich Engel, "We always finished in the upper quarter of all the meets we attended." The boys were not able to go to state, but they did win the West Big Five Invitational.

"We hadn't won this since 1973," said Engel. "Columbus is the only other school besides us to win this trophy."

As a team, the girls' squad also did well. Dawn Lentsch won the state 3A championship.

Dawn won every meet and set new course records at every meet. At State she set a personal record of 11:32.

The seasons ended with 7 girls and 15 boys lettering.

Tigers meet personal goals

"The most outstanding player this year would have to be Diane Berry," volleyball coach Anne Boerschel said.

"It is very hard to single out one person because the girls worked so well as a team. At all levels, they were all equal."

She said, "The highlights of the year were when we played Ft. Dodge and West. They were good competition, and exciting games."

Another high point for the Tigers was when they tied for second place in the Columbus Invitational. The outlook for next year will be "super," she said. "Even though we are losing good people, we are gaining good people too."

She said she felt that the year was "excellent." "We set many goals and met them. We won more than we lost, and were 11-10-2. They were a great bunch of kids which made it more fun for me as coach," she said.

Gymnasts set scoring record

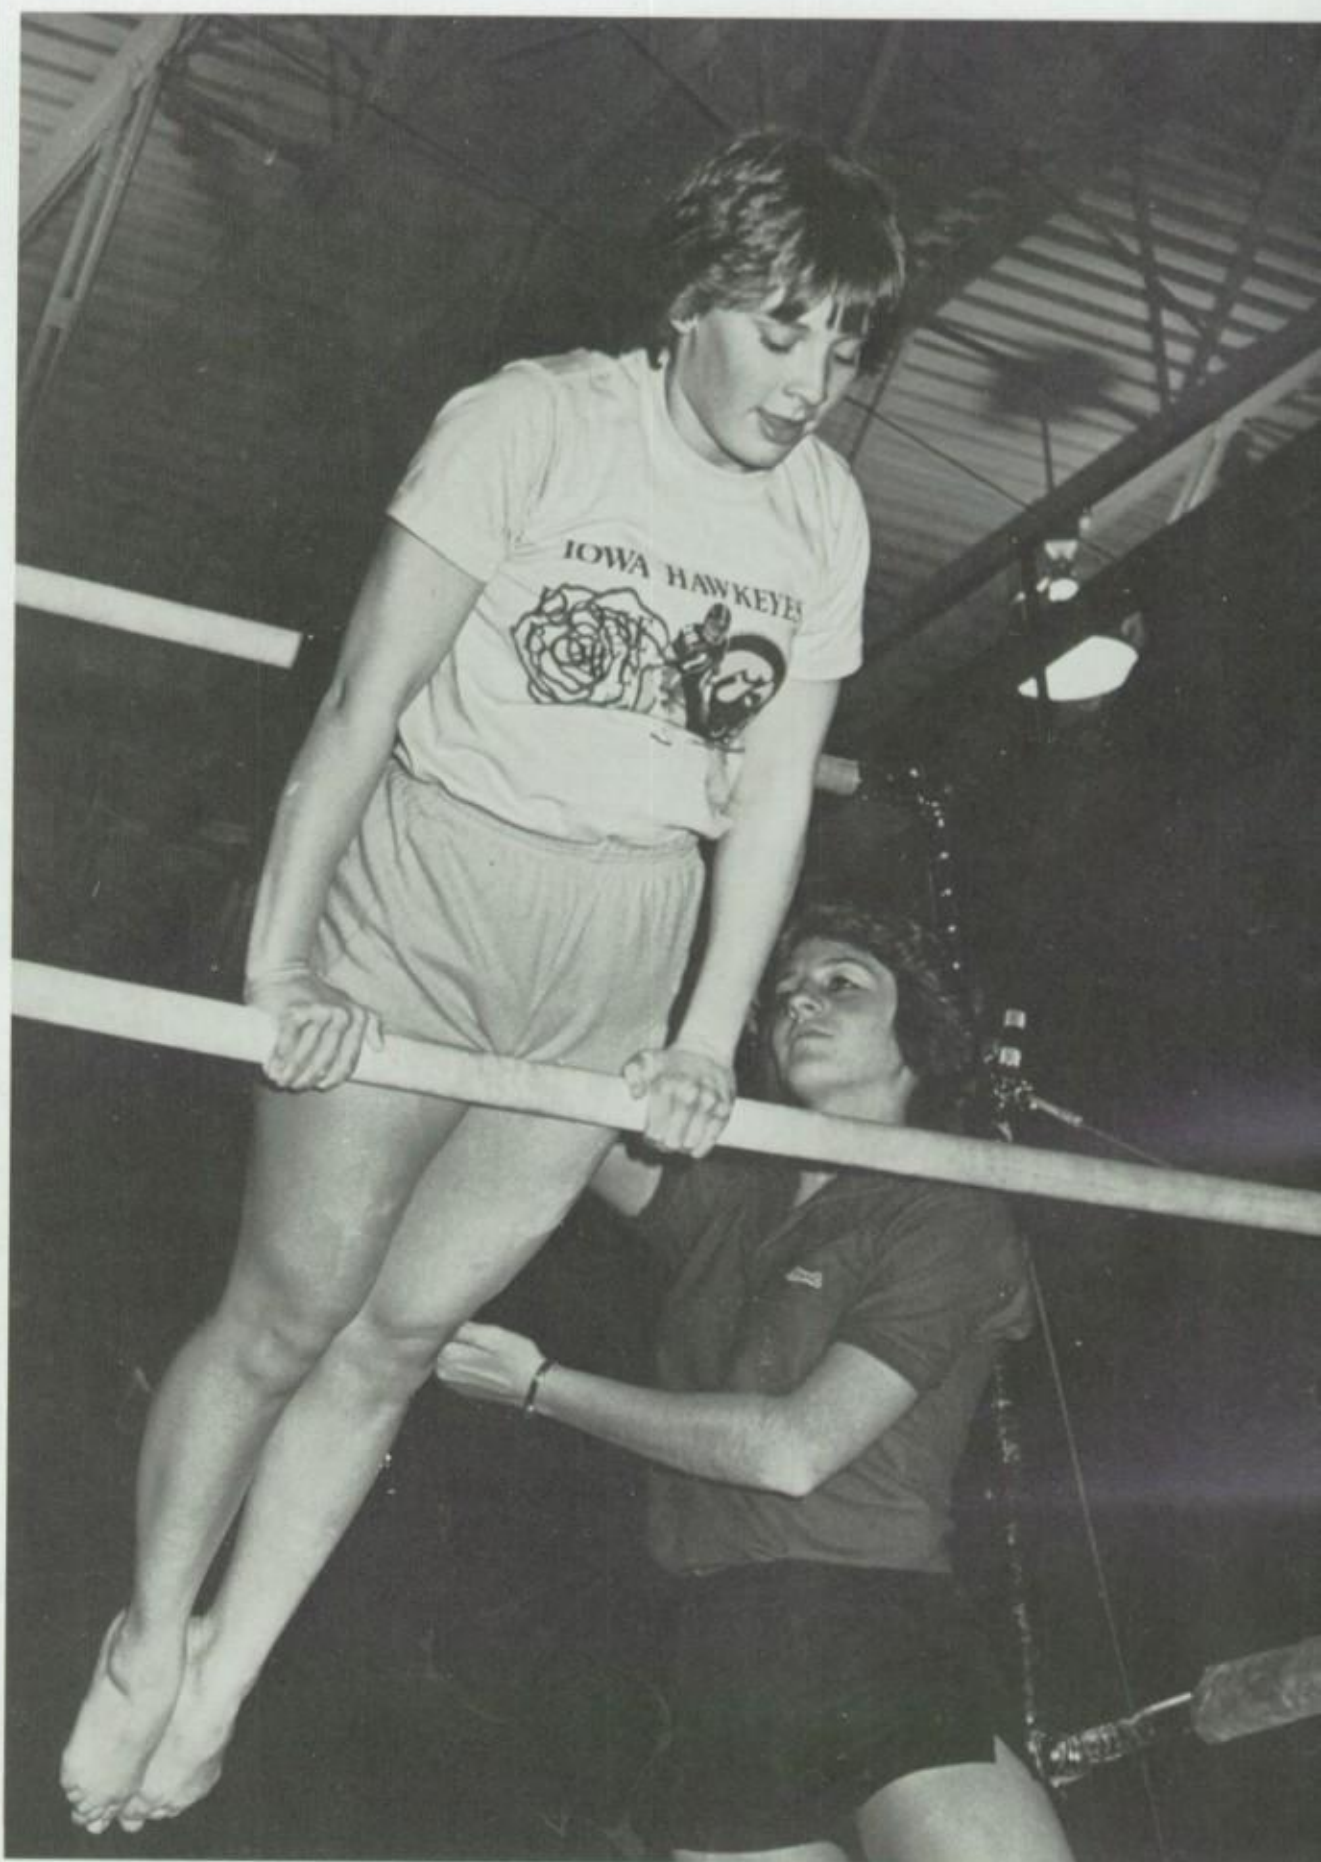

The gymnastics team set a new school record in scoring, 150.85 at the West Invitational, said coach Margaret Boss.

"At the beginning of the season there was a lack of self confidence due to the addition of a lot of new girls, but in the long run they pulled through," Boss said. "There were a lot of individual high scores when the team worked at their full potential."

Four girls qualified for districts and regionals. They were Kelly Dirks, Stephanie Snyder, Lori Henry and Kristine Krause.

Dirks was the only one who qualified for state, and she placed third on the uneven bars.

Wrestlers placed fourth at the district wrestling tournament, advancing two to state.

Three wrestlers "wrestled extremely well all through the season" and placed over the .500 mark, Coach Keith Young said. They were Brian Brummel, 145; Randy Young, 167; and Mike Llewellyn, 185. Young and Llewellyn both won their weight classes at the Tiger Invitational and were named most improved and most valuable wrestler of the season, respectively.

Young and Randy Rausch were both state qualifiers. Young placed sixth at the state tournament. He was awarded the Scott Bartels Wrestling Award as CF's top wrestler of the year.

On the junior varsity level, Sean Alexander was named junior varsity wrestler of the year. Young said, "Although Sean was only on JV, he was an outstanding wrestler and deserved the letter he earned."

Coach Young said, "The sophomores that are coming up to the high school next year are good, so we will be looking at them to fill in the lighter and middle weights what we will be losing to graduation."

Coach calls swim seasons 'success'

Girls' swimmers and divers ended up with a dual meet record of 6-2 and placed second in their triangular meet against Columbus and Central.

"It was a small team with a lot of desire, and the girls had outstanding performances as a team," said Coach Dick Marcussen. "The team did not have superstars, but excelled regardless of that fact. Laura Bunkofske finished in the top 10 at state. Other than that we swam as a team, proving over and over we could be the best," Marcussen said.

The girls finished third in the Big Eight meet.

The girls did well concerning their goals as individuals and as a team. "We try to do both, but our win-loss efforts gave us a successful season. Our outstanding individual efforts made other swimmers improve and come to the top and so both individual and team efforts worked together. The outcome of our season was a big success," Marcussen said.

Heeney's girls have winning cage season

The varsity girls basketball team ended a winning season with an 11-8 record.

Coach Dave Heeney commented, "I really enjoyed working with such a super bunch of young ladies!"

Heeney said, "The real highlights of our season were handing Fort Dodge their first loss of the season and doing it on their home floor. At the time they were rated third in Class 2A and 7th overall in the state. We stopped Columbus's 28-game metro winning streak and beat every team in the Big 8 at least once." Thirteen senior girls lettered.

Diane Berry was named to the second all-Big Eight team. Kate Bradley, Jane Olson, Cathy Oltmann, Jill Stemmerman and Julie Ver Heul received Big Eight honorable mention.

Coach Heeney resigned as head coach after eight years of coaching basketball at Cedar Falls High.

irls break 7 school records

Coach Dave Heeney's girls' track team had its best season in the eight-year history of the program.

The girls set seven new school records and qualified for state in five events. Junior Dawn Lentsch was involved in five of the seven school records.

Lentsch ran the 400 meter dash in 1:01.03 and the 800 meter run in 2:13.27, capturing the overall title in state for the eighth best time ever run in Iowa. She ran the 1500 meters in 4:43.02 to win the 3A title at the state meet and the 3000 meter run in 10:39.47 at the state federation meet. Her other record was in the 1600 medley relay with Cathy Oltmann, Jeannie Haman and Diane Berry.

The remaining two records were set in the discus and the 4 x 400 meter relay. Mary Gaffney tossed the disc 105'7½" in the Tiger Invitational, and Julie Snyder, Oltmann, Haman and Berry ran the 4 x 400 in 4:07.57 at the district meet.

"The biggest moment of the year was qualifying in five events for state," said Heeney. Lentsch went in the 800 meter run, 1500 meter run and in the distance medley relay with Oltmann, Haman and Berry.

The 4 x 400 relay and the 4 x 800 relay (Berry, Oltmann, Kathy Schreiber and Wanda Bolte) also qualified. As a team, the girls placed tenth in the state meet.

Heeney retired from coaching at the end of the season, his eighth as head girls' track coach.

Inexperience, weather slow tennis team

The boys' tennis team finished the season with a 4-6 record, placing second in their own Tiger Invitational.

In the invitational, Mark Ahrenholz and Ken Sanders won the doubles.

The weather played havoc with the team's practice schedule. Team members were able to practice outside only three times before their first match. They also had to reschedule a lot of meets because of the late snow fall.

Coach Chuck Frazier said, "The three major disappointments of this season were losing to Cedar Rapids Washington and Columbus by 4-5 and not having anyone from the team qualify for state."

Frazier said, "We had a fine season, even though we had an inexperienced team. The guys tried hard and played hard."

Lettermen were Mark Ahrenholz, Ken Sanders, Randy McGinnis, J. C. Zalog, Todd Barnes, Brian Brummel and Loren Sandvik.

Frazier said, "Next year I am very optimistic. We only have one returning letterman, but we should be getting some help from this year's junior varsity and three talented ninth graders."

G irls record smashing year

The girls' tennis team finished off the year with an 8-3 record, their best overall record in school history.

Coach Phyllis Ver Ploeg felt the two highlights of the season were the Tiger Invitational and the Big Eight meet in which the Tigers finished first and second, respectively.

At the Tiger Invitational, Kris Tressler won in the consolation singles. Tressler and Jo Johnson won the consolation doubles.

Amy Huth and Cindy Eason placed first in singles and also won the doubles. Maria Garrison placed second in singles. Janet Robinson and Garrison placed second in doubles.

Ver Ploeg said, "I feel the biggest downfall in our season was the weather. It was constantly raining."

Tressler tied the season record as number one player with a 7-4 record.

Major letter winners were seniors Allison Andre, Eason, Garrison, Robinson, Lisa Scarbrough and Tressler, sophomore Amy Huth and freshman Johnson.

Ver Ploeg said, "I felt I had a lot of depth all the way through the team. But I'm losing four seniors from the squad so the underclassmen will have to work hard next year."

Softball team opens with wins

As the school year ended, softball coach Rich Baumann said the '82 season had a positive outlook.

He said, "The outlook is very good. When you return nine starters, that improves potential."

The team had an outstanding chance of going all the way, he said. The best aspects of the team were good pitching, defense and hitting, he said. "If we continue to improve, I see no problems in the future."

Last year the team ended the season with 19 wins and 9 losses and a total of 11 letter winners. Returning letter winners were Angie Mikkelsen, Terri Benson, Jill Stemmerman, Sarah Rietz, Julie Jenkins, Jane Olson, Kathy Shinstine, Teresa Tangeman, Diane Berry, Mary Gaffney and Julie Fiddick. Baumann said that the most memorable experience last year was "winning the sectional and getting into the semi-finals."

For the first season in 1982 the team had a paid assistant coach, Janelle Young. Baumann said the most memorable experience this year is "just working with the kids."

The team started the season by bringing home the trophy from the Hudson Invitational. Each team member also received an individual medal.

Coach Dave Welter's baseball team began the season with 10 returning lettermen from the 1981 team which went 24-11.

Lettermen were Brian Brummel, Mike Chandler, Mark Frye, Brad Hunemuller, Dan Kelling, Frank Krogh, Steve Nesvik, Mike Peters, Randy Rausch and Doug Svobodny.

Welter said, "I think the key word in describing this year's club will be 'competitive.' We are at least two deep at every position."

The team scheduled a 35-game high school schedule plus a 16-game American Legion schedule for additional playing time and game experience.

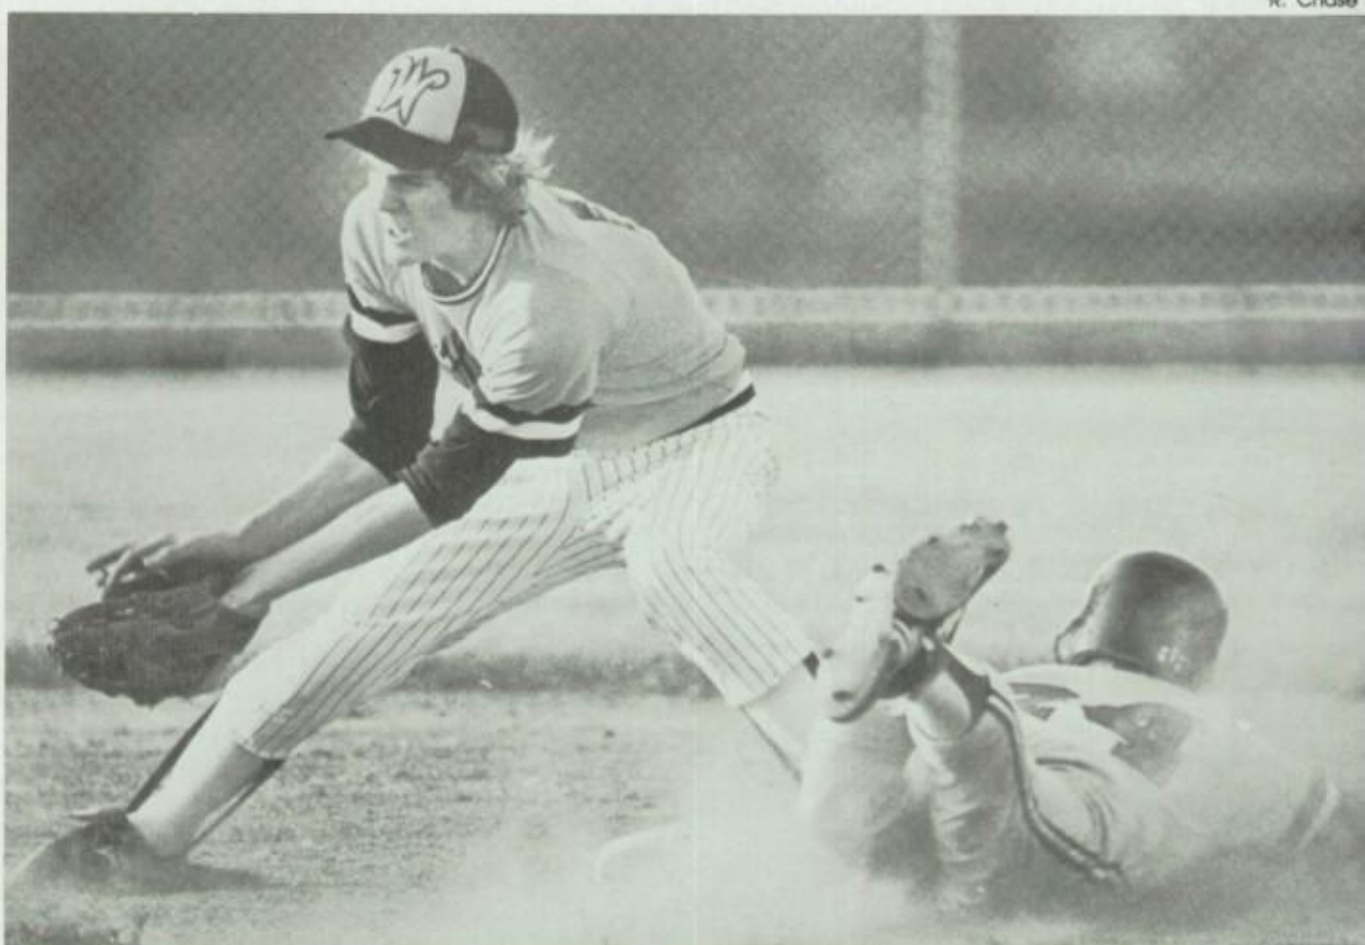

The Tigers opened their season with an upsetting 0-10 loss to Charles City. They beat Waverly-Shell Rock 2-1, split with Columbus 7-1 and 6-7 and split with West 2-6 and 16-5 before the school year ended.

Brad Hunemuller successfully steals second base in the third inning of the Tigers' early season game against West. The Tigers split the double-header.

In the Tigers' early season game with Waverly-Shell Rock, Taylor Pine safely steals second base sixth inning.

For the first time at Cedar Falls High School, an intramural volleyball tournament was held during September and October. Head volleyball coach Anne Boerschel organized and sponsored the tournament.

She said, "One of the main reasons for setting up the intramural teams was to give girls who would not see much action on the interscholastic team a chance to play."

Leslie Beal said, "I feel that it was a good idea and it allowed a lot of people to play more."

Intramural team captians were from the varsity volleyball team — Leslie Beal, Diane Berry, Julie Jenkins, Cathy Oltmann, Cindy Sharp and Traci Woods. Oltmann, Cindy Sharp and Traci Woods.

School Life Necessities

Herald Square, Lattas, Pedigree, Reliance, wide rule and college rule are terms with which any student becomes all too familiar.

These pens, pencils and papers are all school life necessities. On the average, a student will use 7,000 sheets of notebook paper and approximately 500 pencils and pens during the course of a scholastic career.

These tools of all students range from the number-two lead pencils required on the Iowa Tests of Educational Development answer sheets to Bic Bananas and fancy Flairs.

But the necessities do not end there. Money is also an obvious essential. This medium of exchange is required to purchase everything from a new pair of the "right label" jeans to a felt tip pen or a bus ticket.

As one student noted, "These are the tools of the trade."

Kathy Jones makes a protein snack in food and nutrition.

Teresa Thorson makes a sandwich of toast and peanut butter in food and nutrition.

Classes like Adult Living, Foods and Nutrition, Arithmetic for Adult Living and Child Development prepared students for life on their own.

Adult Living teacher Liz Rath taught students about personality development, human relations, communication and lifestyles.

The course included discussion of family crises such as divorce, aging, death and dying.

"Pigging out" and "chowing down" were Food and Nutrition students' favorite activities. Foods I teacher Ann Eades also taught students about table settings, dinner-ware, basic skills and management.

Second semester foods students learned about food preparation, meal planning, market management and household equipment purchasing.

Arithmetic for Adult Living was taught by Bill Bader. He commented, "Hopefully, people in this class will become familiar with situations that they will encounter as adults.

"These include both financial responsibilities and opportunities that all citizens must face and knowing the terminology and theory of life insurance, mortgages contracts and taxes," he said.

Reading, writing and ACT's

High school helped prepare students for the future. Some people chose jobs, others the military, and many chose more education after high school.

Some of the courses geared for the college-bound were Composition and Rhetoric, Great Books and Elementary Analysis.

Composition and Rhetoric proved to be helpful for college-bound students, Lee Ver Mulm, one of the course instructors, said. "The class prepares students for writing competency exams," he said.

"It also prepares students for writing tasks in non-English course work. Comp and Rhet prepares students for required college freshman writing classes and teaches them the skills and values of good notetaking, careful listening, essay examination writing," he said.

Another English course for the college-bound, Great Books, was taught by Marguerite Vance. She said her students read the same books a college class would.

Vance said her class prepared students for courses like humanities, often required in college.

Instructor Lloyd Peterson described Analysis as being "a very thorough class for those going on to college level math and for those going into careers requiring college level math."

Guidance office personnel also helped students prepare for the future. Beginning in the ninth grade, students received help from senior high counselors to plan schedules to best benefit the students.

In their junior and senior years counselors helped students complete college and scholarship applications.

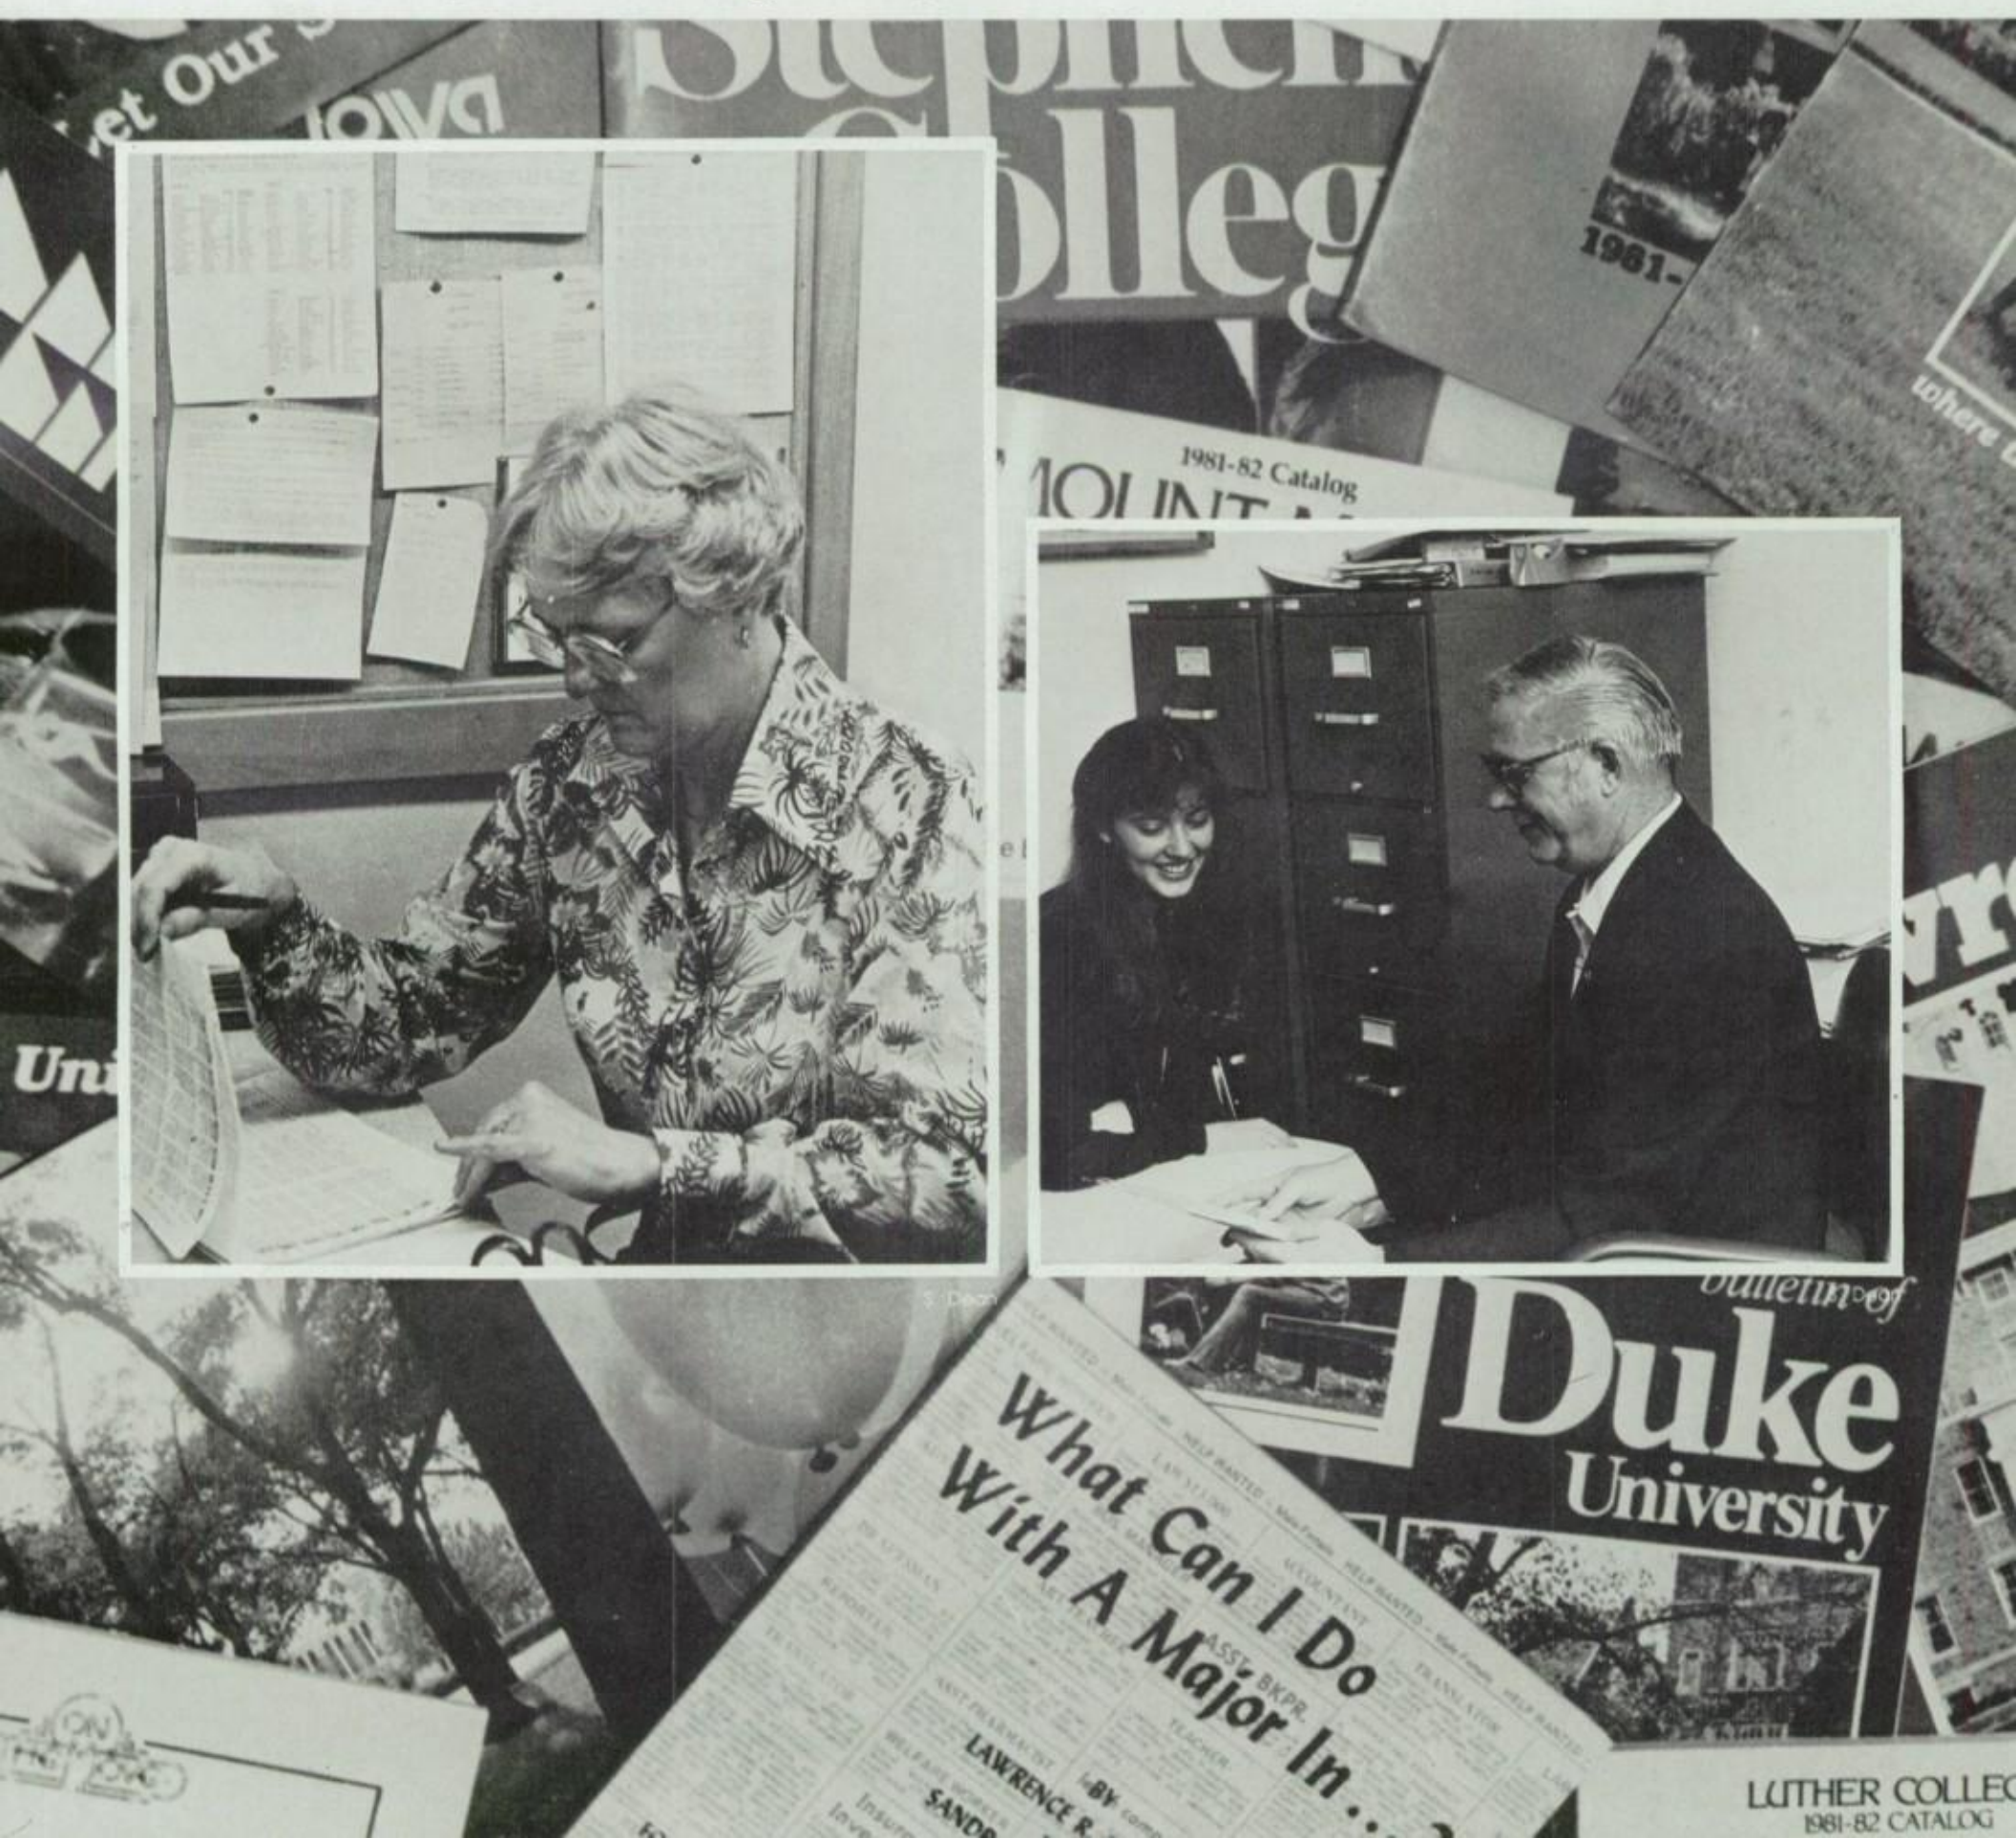

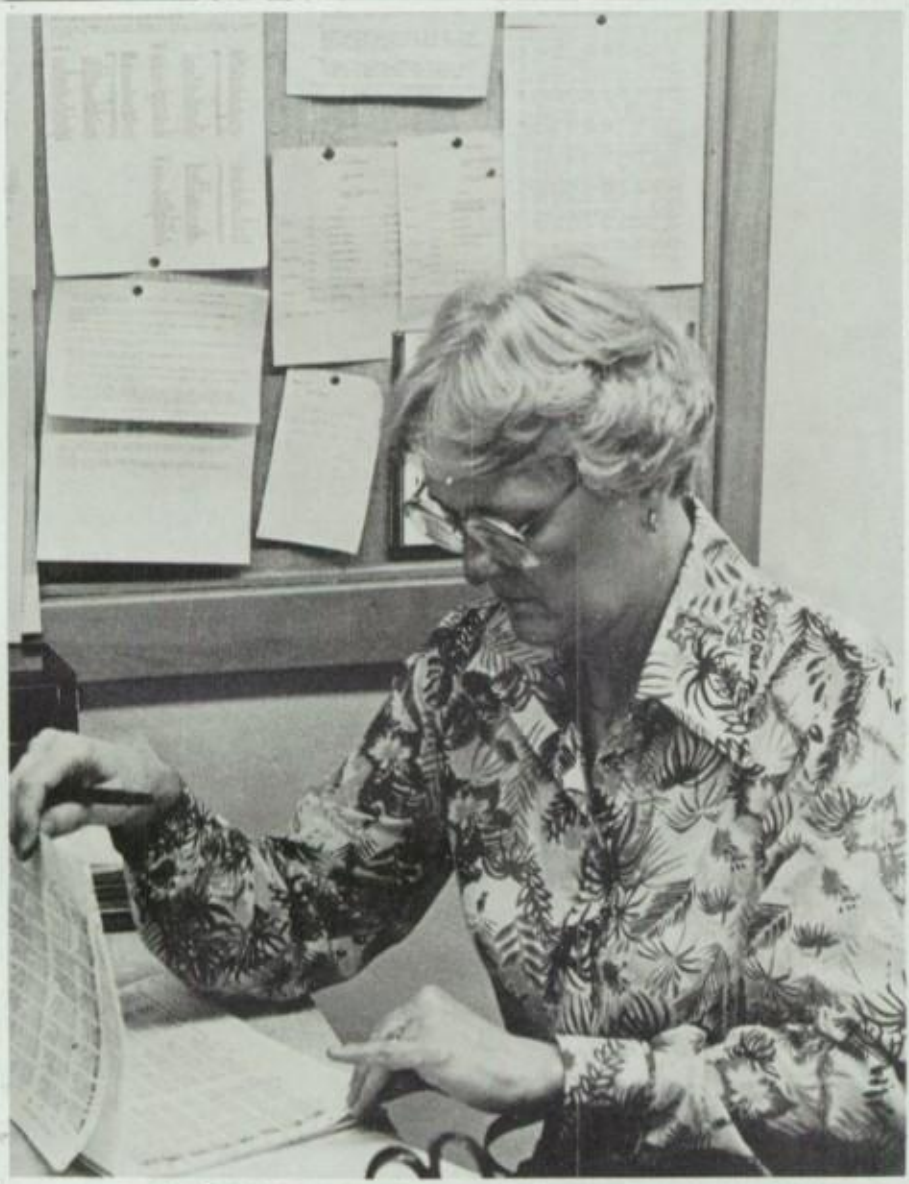

Senior booklets told seniors what they needed to know about graduation procedures and requirements. Counselors scheduled senior interviews to discuss students' plans.

Representatives from various colleges and vocational schools visited the high school regularly to talk with interested students and help them plan their futures.

Woods class makes time

In Woods II, students designed and mass produced their own clocks. Classes were divided into groups with each group producing a different clock part, instructor Paul Hess said.

Two of the classes' clocks were entered in the Iowa Industrial Arts Exposition May 7 at UNI where they tied for first place.

Woods I was offered as an introduction to woods, designed to refine working skills and further students' knowledge of power equipment.

Projects were individually fabricated, Hess said.

In Furniture Construction classes, students spent the semester producing furniture pieces. Technical Woodworking specialized on wood fabricating techniques such as laminating, bending, pattern making and hollow core construction, Hess explained.

Clock making was offered on a trial basis this year. It was so successful that it will be offered again next year, Hess said.

Acting encourages language studies

Richard Simmons, Bob and Doug, castaways from "Gilligan's Island" and contestants from "The Dating Game" were all alive and well in the foreign language rooms.

Aside from working in textbooks and learning new verbs, students in Brandt Stum's German classes, Lucille Walter's French classes and Kay Hines' Spanish classes spent two weeks on skits.

Students then performed for the other foreign language classes at the high school and at the junior highs.

There were four reasons why skits were important to the foreign language curriculum. Teachers said visits from high school students encouraged ninth graders at Peet and Holmes to continue taking foreign languages at the high school and textbooks alone didn't encourage students to use their foreign language skills.

"Skits make students use their Spanish in other ways than just in textbooks," said Hines. Skits also encouraged students' creativity and confidence in front of people.

The most important benefit, however, was the break from the ordinary routine. Skits were a fun activity and students were more than willing to abandon their textbooks for two weeks.

According to junior Kelli Klammer, the funniest part of the skits was "seeing the guys dressed up like girls," referring to a group of Hines' fifth hour boys who re-enacted a segment of "The Dating Game."

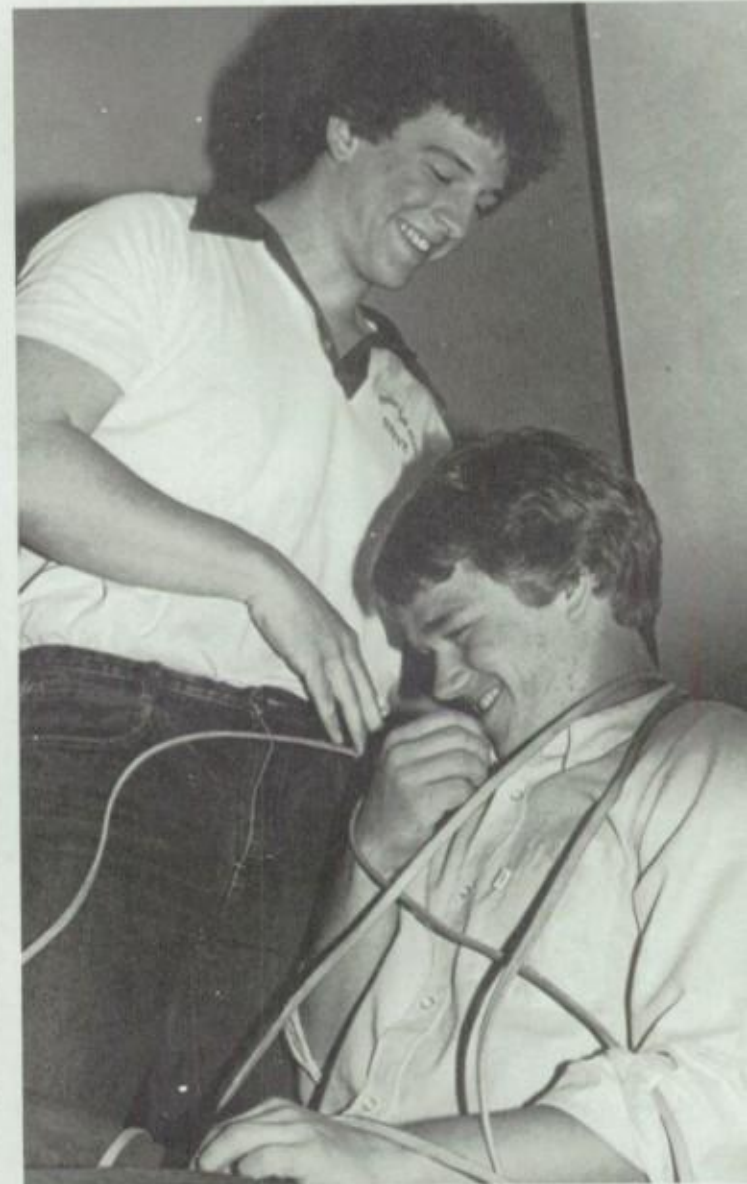

Skits were not all fun; they required thought and preparation. Coming up with an original idea was the most important step. "Most ideas are from T.V. shows and commercials," said junior Angie Mikkelsen.

The next important step was getting the script down in a foreign language. This was where learning came in.

Not only were skits enjoyed by the students who put them on, but they were also a treat for those who got to watch. "In my opinion, the skits were funny and entertaining! Sure beats a day in class!" said senior Sandy Roberts.

"I thought they were very funny and quite creative," said sophomore Michaela Sheehan.

Students also used a computer in the guidance office, to help them become more informed about occupations and to help make occupational choices, the Career Information System of Iowa (CISI).

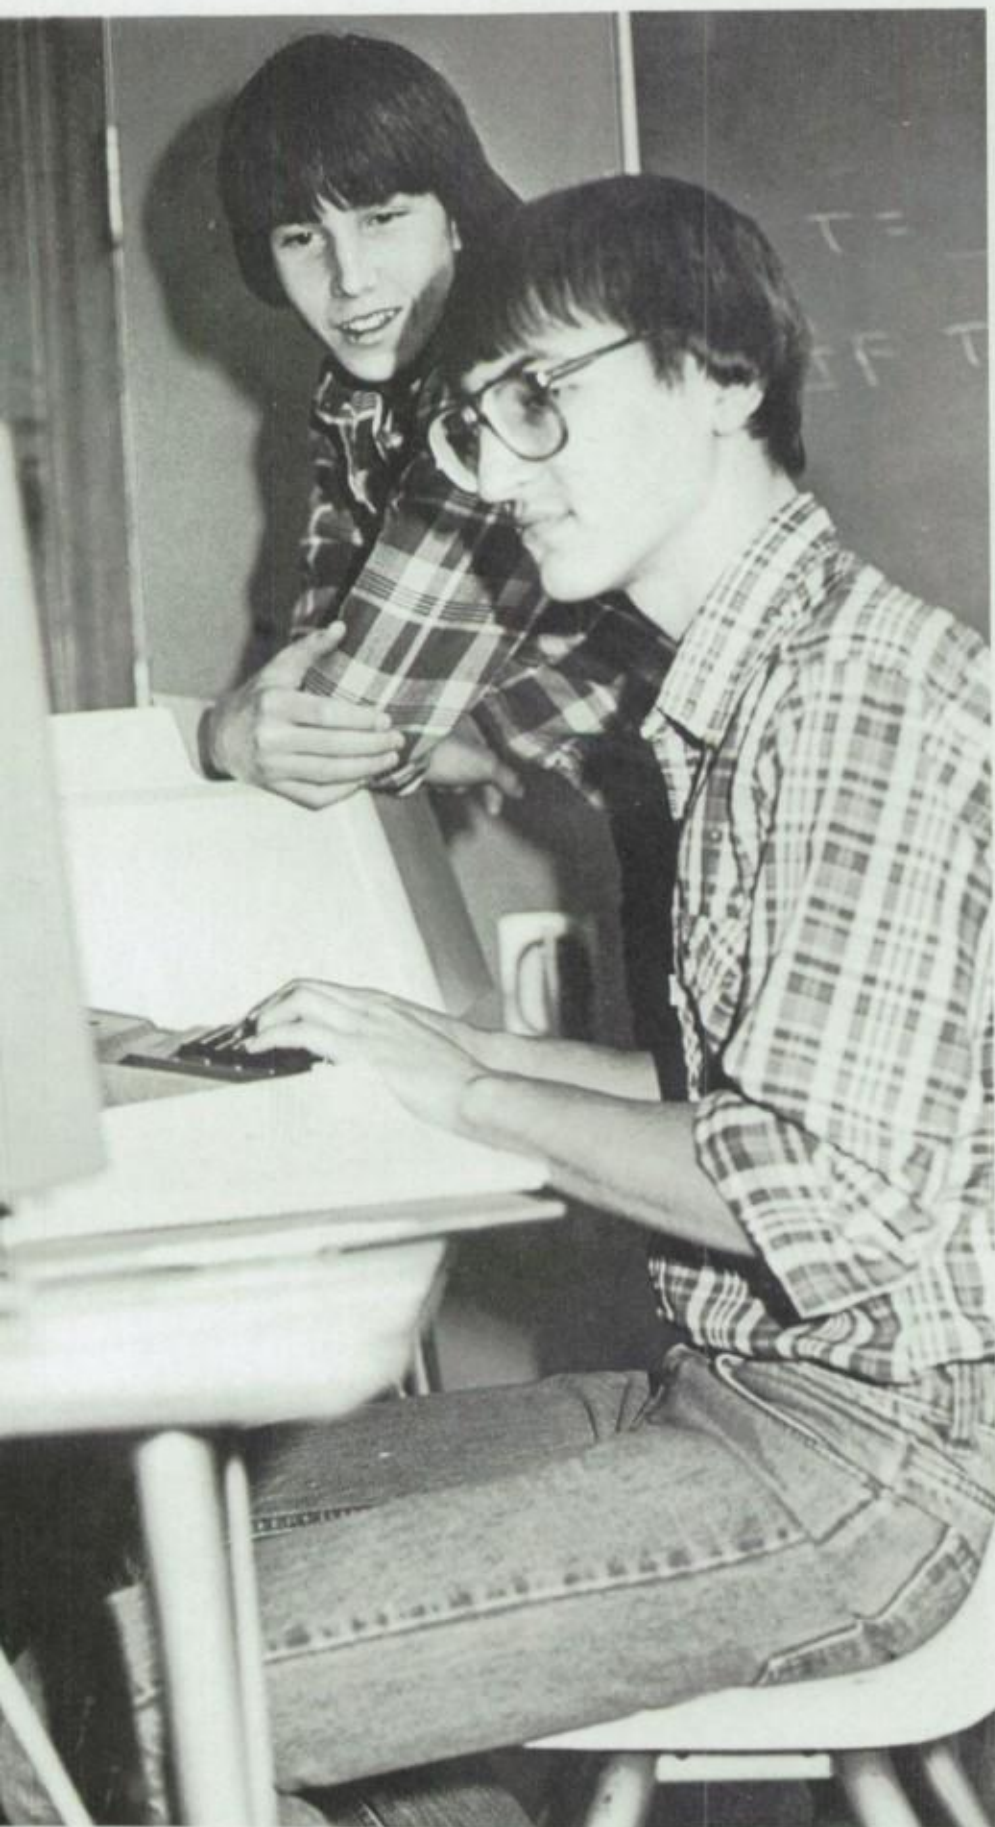

The computers in math were used for instruction in BASIC language and also for applications in daily life.

The computers in business were used by students learning about computer use in the business world. In Computer for Business, students learned how to write programs and transfer them into the computer.

"Learning about computers in high school helps students to realize how much impact computers have in today's business society," said math department chairman Dave Harris.

"Enrollment has increased every year since we first began teaching computer classes in 1972," he said.

Art fosters self-expression

As a creative outlet, students enjoyed art classes, with painting classes most popular.

Art teacher Jerry Nissen explained, "Beginning painting offers students a series of different painting experiences.

"In advanced painting, students can select a lot of their work or I give them problems to solve with reasonable restrictions," he said.

Jeff DeSmidt paints the finishing touches on his comical clay dwarf.

"In beginning drawing, we begin with exercise drawings that are very helpful to students," Nissen said. "It helps them to sketch more freely, accurately and sensitively. It also helps them to proportion things better.

"In sculpturing, we do sculpture problems, metal casting, plaster clay sculptures and wax sculptures," he said.

"This year, sophomores are just excellent artists," Nissen said. "They are a very high quality, and credit for that should go to the junior highs.

"When we see students who have the qualities of good artists and who have been producing drawing for the last two or three years, we suggest they try for the UNI scholarship or the Iowa State scholarship."

Senior Alan Klemp was named first alternate for a four-year art scholarship following the university's art fair in April. About 60 students from Iowa high schools entered the competition.

The ability to "take direction" was what Charles Koch considered the most important attribute of an actor. "Outside of the obvious physical requirements of sex, height, weight and level of maturity, I think the most important characteristics I look for are ability to 'take direction' easily and the actors' intensity or enthusiasm for the role," he said. "An actor should be versatile or adaptable to a variety of demands, both physical and emotional, and have some awareness of how particular characters' attributes might be communicated to an audience," he said.

"Resourcefulness, enthusiasm and a sincere commitment to do the best job he or she is capable of doing are attributes of my 'ideal actor' and probably apply to most other life endeavors as well,"

Koch said.

Members of working crews had a large part in putting on plays. Crews were props, make-up, costumes, lights, sound, ushers, set construction and video. The play "The Beautiful People," took eight weeks preparation, he said.

Production for "Count Dracula," the spring play took slightly longer.

In Puppet Theater class students learned to make puppets and perform puppet numbers to music. Merle Picht, instructor, said the class helped people to increase communication skills. The goal for the class was for students to learn to make any kind of puppet, he said. Students made four hand-made puppets during the semester.

Working to perfect their mime skills were mime troupe members. They practiced Tuesday and Thursday nights working on their walks and individual skits.

The group's main event was a mime show. They also performed in the variety show. Seniors Dave Ohl and Vicki Curtis had charge of the twelve-member troupe. "To be a part of the troupe, one requirement was to act 'crazy,' said Ohl.

"Radio production is an opportunity for students to explore the radio broadcast industry," said instructor Merle Picht. The purpose of the class is to help students develop communication skills and to develop voices that command attention, he said.

Students learned to do different kinds of broadcast programs.

Picht said he hoped students would learn to believe in themselves.

Co-op, Forum train leaders

Co-op provided on-the-job training based on students' career choices. Trades and Industries students' jobs ranged from production to maintenance and product service. Because of the economy, part-time jobs were harder to find, coordinator Bill McKinley said.

Health Occupation students had to be certified by the state and to complete a course at Hawkeye Tech. Jobs in Health Occupations ranged from nurse's aide to dental assistants to radiologist's helper, said McKinley.

Following a campaign in Des Moines, Gretchen Gogel was chosen regional president, and Marquisette Bickford, treasurer of the Office Education Association. OE students held jobs in accounting, computers, secretarial, clerical, medical and legal fields, according to Sue Hahn, one of the OE coordinators. Jobs in Office Education were opening up in the computer field, Hahn said.

Laura Dotseth was selected state parliamentarian and Carol Settle was elected Area II vice president from local DE classes.

"I think this year was one of the best years Forum has ever had," said Bud Nichols, Forum adviser.

From 47 applicants, 20 students were selected to be part of the student exchange with Ridgewood

High School in Ridgewood, New Jersey. "Student Forum also participated in the fund-raising project for the city library," said Nichols.

They also organized exchanges with Cedar Rapids Kennedy and Washington, Dubuque Hempstead and Waverly-Shell Rock among other schools. Forum planned Homecoming, Christmas, Sadie Hawkins and Prom activities.

Clubs enhance school life

Giving students a chance to kill dragons, rescue fair maidens (or good-looking warriors) and find vast treasure, Dungeons and Dragons games became common at school.

Some devoted "D & D" players formed a club which met after school Mondays in the library. Other groups could be found playing D & D before or after school, during lunch or study hall.

Dungeons and Dragons is a fantasy role-playing game in which players portray characters in a fantasy world. One player is Dragon Master and "plays God," controlling everything that happens to the characters.

Player characters made their way through the fantasy world, fighting monsters and acquiring treasure becoming more powerful and harder to kill.

Mark Aneweer rolls the dice to determine his fate in a game of Dungeons and Dragons.

Games could last indefinitely, but they usually ended when all characters were killed. Then players could "roll up" new characters using the various dice and start new adventures.

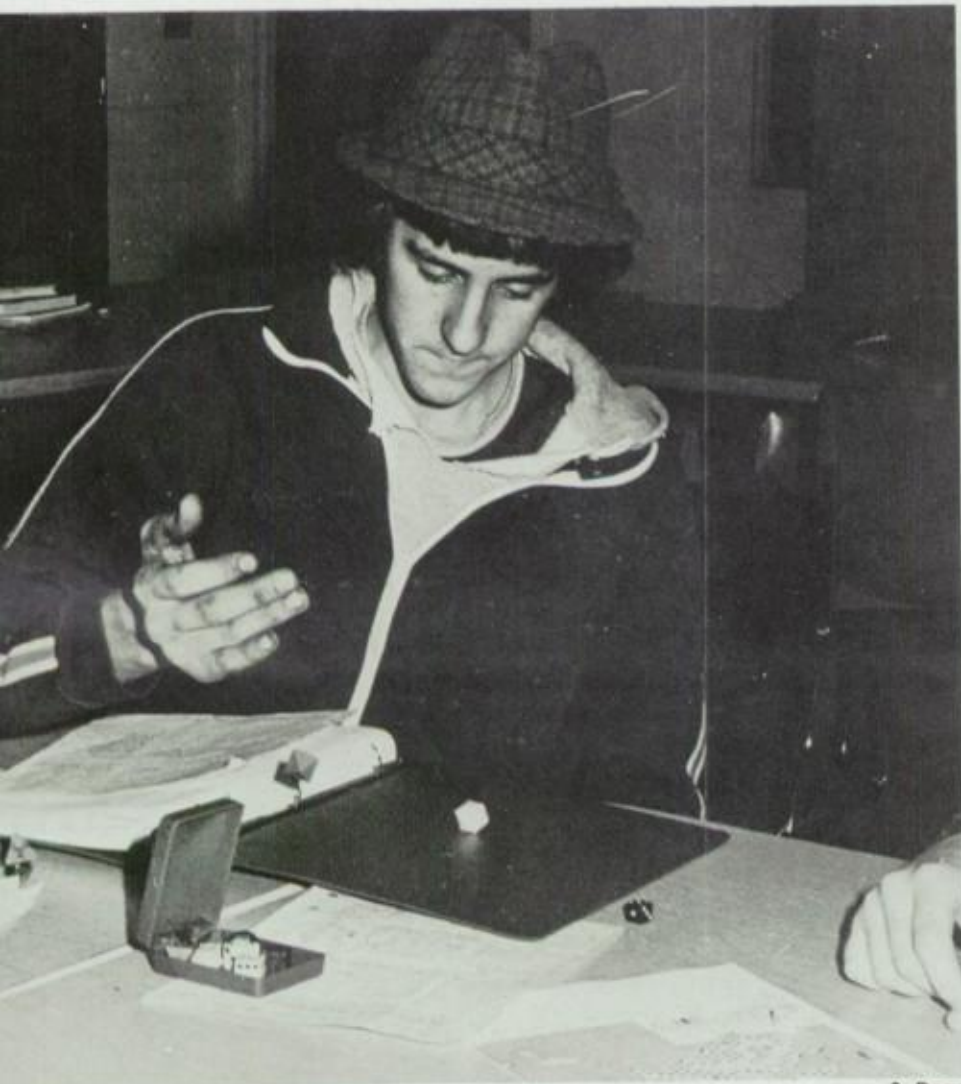

Doors," the creative writing and art booklet, included poems, stories, essays and art work submitted by students from creative writing and art classes. The "Doors" staff, made up of Individualized Honors English students and other interested students, chose selections to be published. Students organized, proofread and edited the book.

The first "Doors" was published in 1971 and its size has grown to 120 pages.

According to creative writing teacher Erik Melberg, who advised the publication, "The 'Doors' book provides an outlet for the fine arts."

Other faculty advisers were art instructor Jerry Nissen and creative writing teacher Mary Smart.

Clubs broaden student interests

Field trips, backpacking, photo instruction and competition were among the benefits offered to students participating in clubs.

Outdoor activities were the major focus of the Ecology Club. Members met every other Wednesday. Together they participated in horseback riding, winter campouts, backpacking and canoeing in northeast Iowa.

Reorganized in the fall as the Bleacher Creatures, members made posters and tried to generate enthusiasm for athletic events.

With a goal of producing the best yearbook in CFHS history, 27 students worked on "Update."

The staff worked on reporting the 1981-82 school year completely and accurately, faculty adviser Judith Funk said. "We have tried to expand our coverage through more complete and detailed copy," she said.

Originally the book was priced at $13, and the price increased to $14 December 21. Approximately 1,000 books had been sold by the end of the school year.

Editor Scott Dean said, "We wanted to offer a book that appealed to every student. We tried to offer a book that was "showy" with plenty of color and all the extras."

The staff studied award winning yearbooks to gather ideas for "Update." For the first time in many years, the CFHS yearbook cover features embossing and foil stamping.

The final update . . .

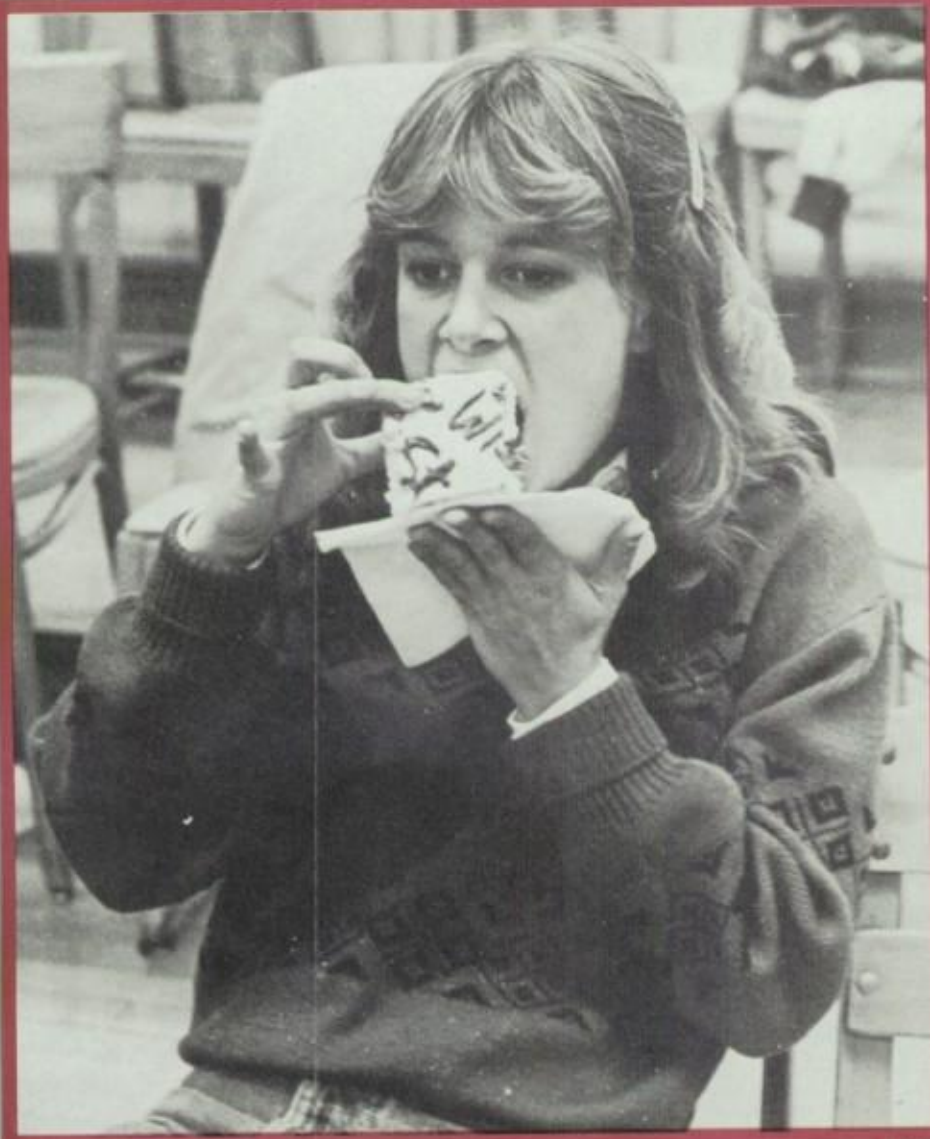

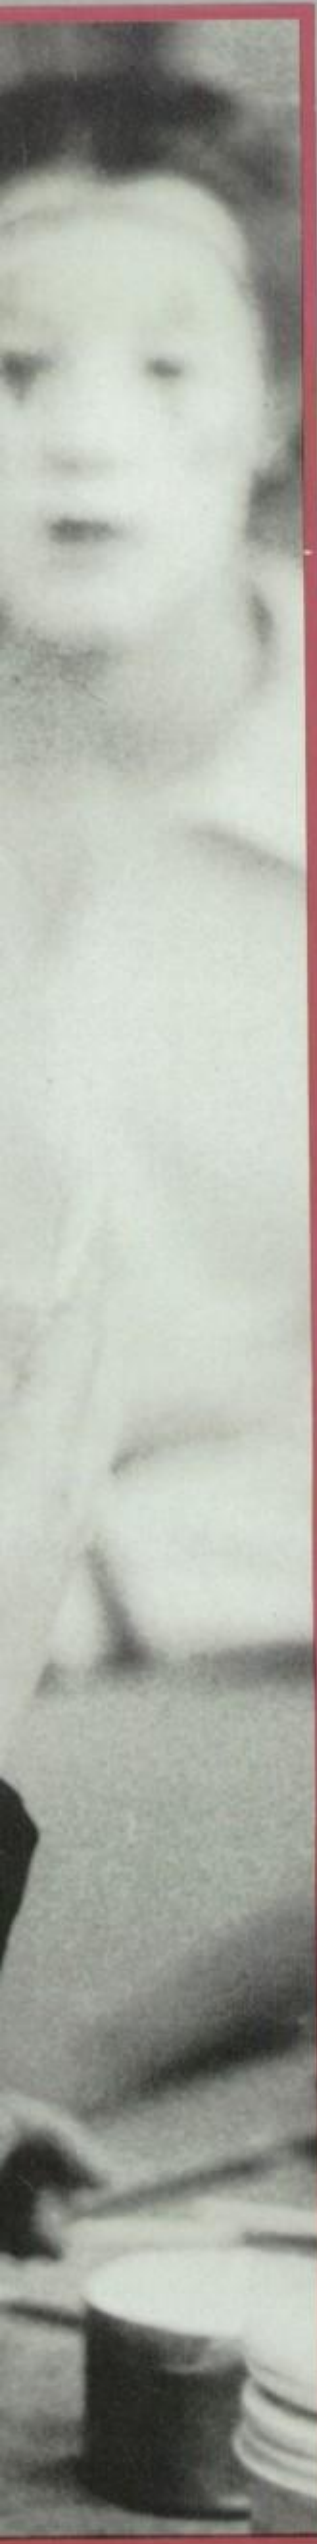

By the end of April, the sunshine had finally removed all traces of the snow. Nice weather did more than its share to promote skipping. More people began to go out for lunch.

The sophomores tried to think of new ways to get out of their study halls. Electric fans appeared in classrooms.

Students started thinking about finding the books they had checked out and not returned so they could receive their grades. Lockers were cleaned out. This is where most of the books as well as many other forgotten items were found.

Sunny days finally arrive

To save money, busses for gym activities were dropped, so students could no longer go bowling in gym class.

The traditional senior trip to Waverly for a day of downhill skiing was also dropped for financial reasons.

Students still went to the UNI courts and to Birdsall Park to play tennis. Other gym classes stayed on the school grounds, formed co-ed teams and played some exciting games of softball. Other students jogged around the asphalt track.

During the closing week of classes, gym classes made their traditional trek to a convenience store for "nutritious" snacks.

To entertain themselves during open lunch shifts, students tossed footballs and threw frisbees on the front lawn. Others "caught rays" while listening to portable radios and car stereos.

During release hours, some students found it relaxing to sit outside on the steps or under a tree to read or study.

For the first time, the school adopted a two-day final examination schedule for the last days of the year. Underclassmen enjoyed the opportunity to have a two-hour "all-school open lunch" Thursday, June 3.

Falkland crisis headlines news

As the school year drew to a close, we became aware of a tiny island group in the south Atlantic, the Falklands.

Argentine troops seized the Falklands in April and after diplomatic negotiations failed, the British army attacked in May.

The Royal Family announced November 5 that Diana, Princess of Wales, was expecting an heir to the British throne in June. Closer to home, Governor Robert D. Ray, who had occupied the governor's office since 1968, announced that he would not run for re-election in 1982.

Cable television became available throughout the city during the school year, and students began watching MTV, Showtime and Home Box Office in their spare time. Movie stars Natalie Wood and John Belushi died tragically in November and March, respectively. Entertainer Barbara Mandrell became the first performer in history to win the Country Music Association's Entertainer of the Year award twice.

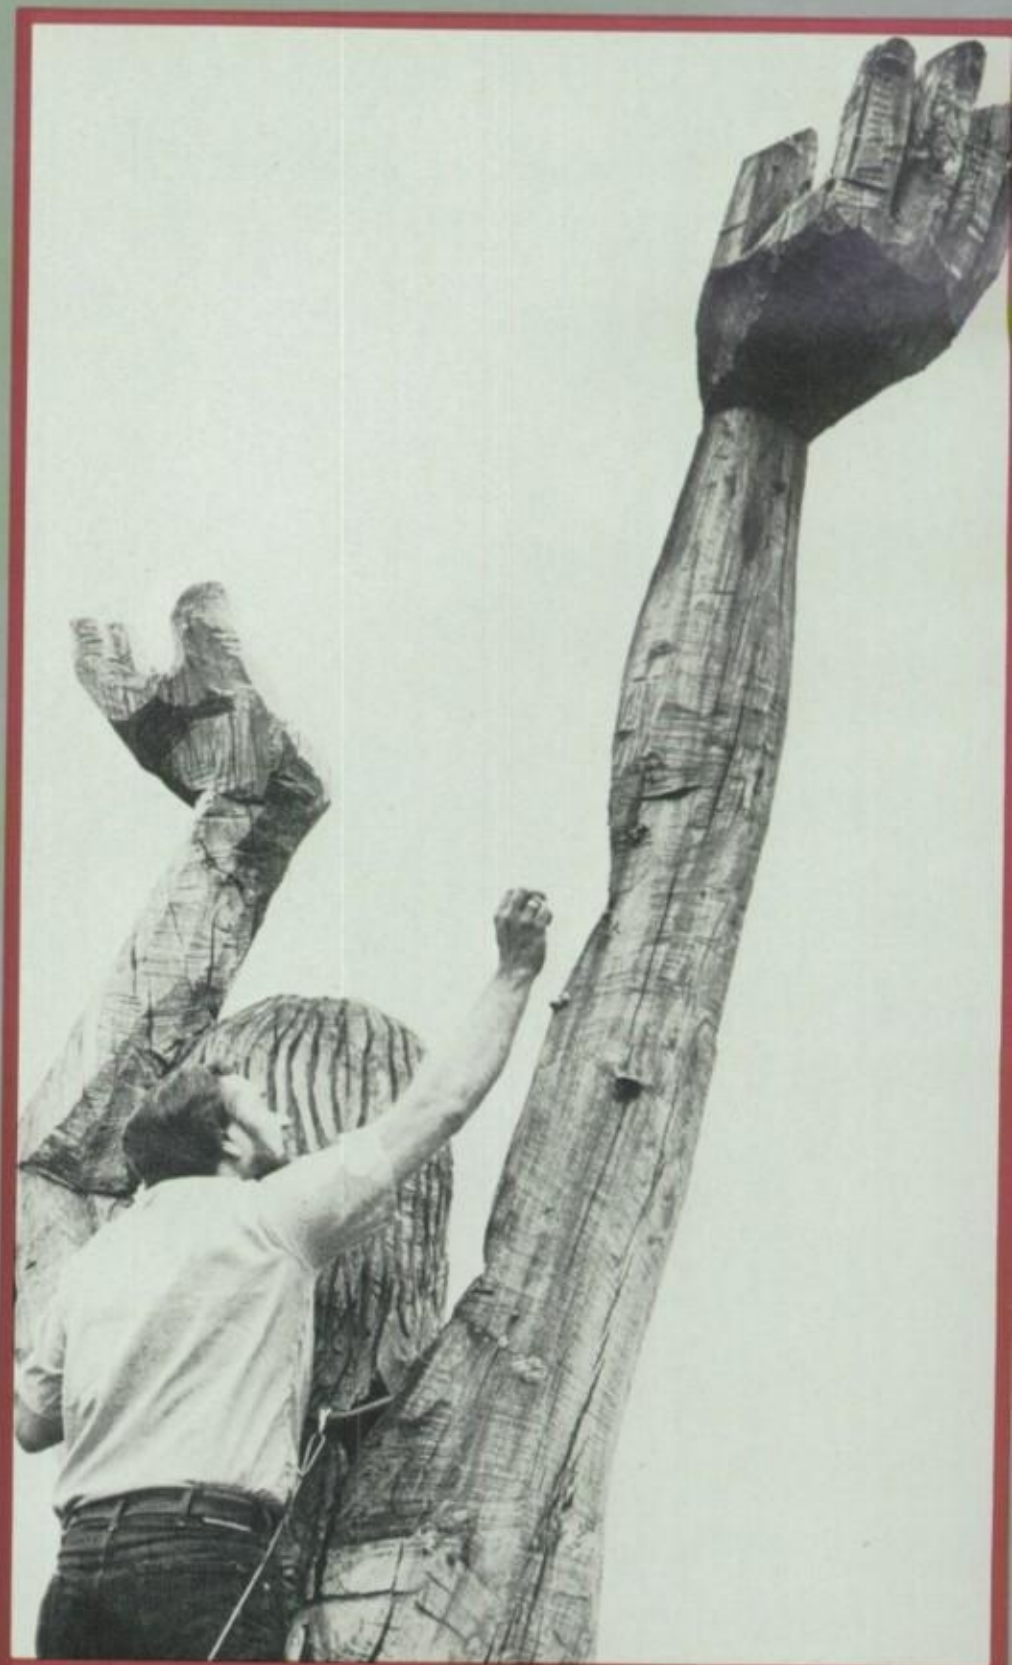

On the sports scene, the Iowa Hawkeyes shared the Big Ten football title with Ohio State and made their first Rosebowl appearance in more than 20 years. Clemson won the national college football title and San Francisco won the Super Bowl. Marcus Allen, University of Southern California tailback, won the Heisman Trophy.

North Carolina won the NCAA basketball championship.

Locally, the economy suffered as summer approached with large-scale layoffs at the John Deere Waterloo Tractor Works. On the brighter side, world surpluses of oil caused the price of regular gasoline to drop to about $1 a gallon in April.

A monument to the elm carved by UNI student John Faust in 1974 on the lawn of the Lutheran Student Center in Cedar Falls was discovered to be deteriorating. Here, Dr. Harrison Goodall taps the sculpture with a screwdriver to see how solid it is. It was removed for preservation and was to be returned to its original location near the Lutheran Student Center after restoration.

The search was on for James "T-Bone" Taylor, accused of shooting Waterloo policemen Wayne Rice and Michael Hoing July 12, 1981. Detasseling machines and helicopters were used to comb corn fields near LaPorte City. Taylor was captured near LaPorte City and was later convicted of first-degree murder on two counts.

After their July 29, 1981 wedding ceremony, 32-year-old Prince Charles and 20-year-old Diana, Princess of Wales, stand on the steps of St. Paul's Cathedral in London overlooking a crowd of a million people.

Hot rods, heavy metal hit 'strip'

As Friday and Saturday nights became warmer, hot rods came out of storage and started cruising "the strip," University Avenue. Sixties and rims went on and you could hear the wheels squeal and smell the tires burn.

Stereo and tape volumes rose. Some of the popular groups blaring from tape players were Loverboy, Van Halen, Journey and Alabama. The spring's top songs were "I Love Rock and Roll" by Joan Jet and the Black Hearts, "Pretty Woman" by Van Halen and "Working for the Weekend" by Loverboy.

When spring finally arrived, we put away wools and winter weight clothes and brought out t-shirts in bright, bold colors.

As the school year ended, sophomores and juniors took final examinations in all classes for the first time.

After two days of tests, students began their summer vacations Friday, June 4, giving little thought to school life. Four hundred forty-eight seniors had left school the week before, never to return to classes at Cedar Falls High School. And the yearbook staff met the final deadline to produce this book.

As editor of Update, I want to thank several people who helped me and my staff throughout the year we spent compiling this publication.

Rick Chase of The Record cheerfully assisted us in many ways. Besides giving us photos on many occasions, Rick was always available to help us with technical problems and photographic questions.

Maleia Thompson, Becky Wheeler and Betsy Wheeler also provided help with photo assignments throughout the year. Norma Grandy, a graphic artist at Standard Screen Printing, designed our yearbook cover. We are grateful for her efforts and her professional expertise.

Alan Gilbert, a 1980 CFHS graduate and former yearbook staff member, took all of the candid photos of commencement ceremonies.

Kate Nimrod, secretary to the associate principals and all-around helpful person, cheerfully interrupted her own work many times to find information or supplies and to lend assistance when we needed it.

Hope you enjoy this Update for 1981-82

People, events, memories—
what, after all, is a school?
In photos and words,
members of the yearbook staff have tried to help you relive
the tests, traumas and triumphs,
the fun and friends
that comprised 1981-82.
